

RALPH MCGILL

'Death in The Afternoon'

In January, 1945, I arrived at Orley Field, Paris, from London and went to the Scribe Hotel for quarters. The lobby was dim, lit only with hissing carbide lamps such as are used in remote fishing camps. As I turned away from the desk I saw Mary Welsh, a really fine American newspaper woman whom I had known for a long time. During the second great war she and an English girl named Hilde Marchant were the two best women reporters in Britain. We stood there talking and finally she said, "Come on down to the bar and meet Pop."

"Pop?" I asked, having just arrived.

"Pop Hemingway," she said. So, we went on down and had a seat in a booth. Pretty soon Hemingway came in, his hands full of packages from the PX shop which was in a small room not far from the bar.

I had never met him before. But I had liked everything he had written, and had long been amused by those critics who were always trying to prove he wasn't the best of our time. It was something like the tick birds who pick ticks off the hippos and other large game animals, a bird described by Hemingway in "The Green Hills of Africa." The critics after Hemingway always reminded me of the tick bird.

Good Talk

After a while Hemingway asked why we didn't go to his quarters at the Ritz hotel. He said he had some champagne on ice for anyone who wanted it. And that we could have dinner there. We did and there was a lot of talk, all good. By then I had realized that there was a great romance on between the two, the big, bearded Hemingway and the slight, perky, self-assured redhead girl. Hemingway had had three marriages before and neither he nor I had been married. He said to me that night, talking about Mary Welsh, "She is the only person I've been in love with who loves me for myself. Do you know," he said, with a sort of naive wonder, "she has hardly read a blank-blank thing I've written."

This was the girl described in the news leads of Sunday afternoon which began: "A chartered plane carrying novelist Ernest Hemingway and his wife crashed over Murchison Falls in Eastern Africa yesterday." There was no sign of life about the wrecked aircraft, search planes reported. It lay piled up three miles below the falls where the Nile plunges about 400 feet through a great rock chasm, which echoes always with the thunder of water. It is in northwest Uganda, in the great game country, and is just above Lake Albert.

Long Journey

Now, as I write, the short and often happy life of Ernest Hemingway presumably is at an end. When the rescue launch makes its long journey there, one may expect a scene with which he best could deal, since he wrote so well of violence and death.

And now, the debate will begin again. Once, after "The Old Man and the Sea" was out, and had won the Pulitzer prize, I sent him what seemed to me a particularly offensive bit of criticism in which a straining critic, finding it necessary to praise, nonetheless was trying to find something wrong about the symbolism. In the letter I asked him how much he bothered about symbolism.

"None at all," he wrote back. "You just tell your story and let it truly, and it will produce all necessary symbolism." He did that and no man has influenced modern writing as much as he.

Some of his writing was bad, but surprisingly little of it was, and much of it was the sort which will live for generations yet unborn to read and admire. He had great faults and virtues. But not even his tick-bird enemies could say he wasn't always honest. "I write as I must," he said, and this was without question true. His heroes lived in a sort of hostile jungle and now he presumably has found death in a jungle filled with great beasts and danger.

Road Toll Soars To 18 in Weekend As Wreck Kills 4

Eight deaths on Georgia highways yesterday sent the weekend traffic toll to 18, one of the worst non-holiday records in years, the State Patrol said.

The toll included four persons who were killed yesterday nine miles north of Louisville when the car in which they were riding struck an electric power pole, snapping it in two, according to police. The car then traveled 200 feet and hit a tree, police said. Four others died in a three-car smashup near Hawkinsville Saturday night.

IN COMA

Mrs. Bessie Leaskway of Savannah, who remained unconscious three hours after the Louisville wreck, was reported in serious condition at Jefferson Hospital in Louisville.

The dead were identified as Hubert Lee Gibson, 36, James L. Green, 35, Benjamin Smith Leaskway, 35, and Ella Grace Parker, all of Savannah. Sheriff J. B. Stanley of Jefferson County said the car was traveling at a high rate of speed and intoxicants were found in the vehicle. He said he could not determine which of the five was the driver.

ROAD TRAGEDY

The three men were killed instantly and the woman died three hours later in Jefferson Hospital, the sheriff said. Geraldine M. Cook, 25, of Vancouver, B.C., was killed yesterday when the car she was driving, traveling at high speed, skidded off the road into a tree on U.S. Highway 19, a mile north of Thomasville, the State Patrol reported.

Ernest Sims and Lawrence Wike, both of Cleveland, were killed yesterday and four others were injured when two cars collided head-on near Cleveland on a state highway, White County Sheriff Bill Allison said.

CAR VICTIM

The State Patrol in Thomasville reported an unidentified white man was killed instantly when he was struck by an automobile six miles north of Camilla on U.S. 19 late last night. Another unidentified white man walking with him was critically injured, police said.

Robert James, 65, Negro, of Waynesboro, a pedestrian, was killed late Saturday when struck by a car on U.S. Highway 25 a mile and a half from Millen, the State Patrol also reported.

Killed in the Hawkinsville collision were three brothers of a Cochran family and a Hawkinsville Negro man. The dead were James W. Mullis, 27, and Leon.

Notre Dame Gets Sugar Bowl Offer Of 5-10-Yr. Pact

Notre Dame has received a long-term contract proposal from the Mid-Winter Sports Association in New Orleans to provide the host team in the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl football game.

The Irish have played in only one bowl game in their history. In recent years the Fighting Irish have turned down repeated offers to play in bowl games.

The Sugar Bowl proposal offered the Irish a 5 to 10-year contract as host team and Notre Dame higher ups are considering the move. For details see Constitution Sports Editor Furman Bisher's story on Page 8.

No Room for General In Seoul Army Chapel

SEOUL, Monday, Jan. 25 (AP)—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor missed church yesterday because he arrived at the 8th Army headquarters chapel two minutes late and found there wasn't even standing room.

In a letter to Col. Earl D. Compton, the chaplain, Milltown, N.J., the 8th Army commander called the incident "a personal disappointment" but "probably a matter for general felicitations."

"As I have always looked forward to the day when 8th Army jails and hospitals would be empty and the churches full," he wrote, "I am happy to find that at least the latter condition is being fulfilled."

Taylor added a request: "As a leading sinner in this community, bedeviled by problems with forked tails, and sorely in need of consolation of the church and the benefit of your excellent sermons, would you kindly reserve me a seat on future Sunday mornings?"

He closed with "best wishes to you and your overflowing congregation."

Hemingway's Plane Crashes In Nile Jungle; Intact Craft Lends Hope He, Wife Lived

Boat Sent To Scene Of Wreck

KAMPALA, Uganda, Jan. 24 (AP)—Ernest Hemingway, the American author, and his wife have been missing since Saturday and their crashed plane was spotted today in the wilds of the Upper Nile country.

No sign of human life was seen about the wrecked plane.

But a British pilot who circled the crash area at 200 feet said the plane seemed damaged only slightly and he believed the occupants could have climbed out safely.

"LITTLE DAMAGE" "One wheel of the undercarriage was broken, but otherwise the plane appeared little damaged," said Capt. R. C. Jude, pilot of a British Overseas Airways Corp.

plane which circled the scene three miles above picturesque Murchison Falls in northwest Uganda.

However, neither Jude nor an RAF search plane pilot who also visited the area, saw any sign of life.

Hemingway, who has combined a life of action with writing some of the most gripping fiction in modern literature, left Saturday in a chartered plane from Nairobi, capital of Kenya colony, on a 600-mile flight over Lake Victoria and Lake Albert to the 400-foot Murchison Falls on the Victoria River.

LIONS, CROCODILES

This is one of the most inaccessible spots in Uganda—dominated by crocodiles, elephants, buffaloes, lions and other big game—and one of the most beautiful.

A search was started when Hemingway, 55, and his fourth wife, whom he married in 1946, failed to land at Masindi, an intermediate point east of Lake Albert, for refueling.

A police launch was dispatched from Butiaba, on the east coast of Lake Albert. It was expected to take several hours to reach the scene.

Capt. Jude said he piloted his Argonaut airliner 80 to 100 miles off course to search and saw a silver Cessna plane lying among scrub trees after he had circled Murchison Falls a few minutes.

"RIGHT PLANE" "It was the right plane without a doubt," he said. "We saw the identification letters VPKLII very clearly."

After noting that the plane appeared little damaged, he added, "I would think the passengers climbed out and made for the river which was only 300 yards away but you cannot tell about these things."

"It looked like the chap did a neat job of landing the aircraft."

He said the plane was "plopped right into" scrub trees and the thick bush made it impossible to discover any signs of human life nearby though he circled as low as 200 feet and saw several elephants and buffaloes roaming about on the other side of the river.

SMALL BOAT

Not far from the spot the BOAC crew saw a small boat drawn up at the river bank.

Jude said he radioed an RAF search plane that he was circling the area until the RAF plane arrived, then he flew on to Khartoum and Cairo where he told his story.

Uganda is a British protectorate in east central Africa, north of Lake Victoria. Hemingway had been in Africa for some time, having spent last week at Amboseli National Park in Tanganyika, which is dominated by Mt. Kilimanjaro, site of one of his most famous stories, "The Snows of Kilimanjaro."

Mrs. Hemingway was the former Mary Welsh, also a writer. Hemingway was 55.

Hemingway Vowed Africa Return 'Where It Pleased Me To Live'

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—Ernest Hemingway was born in Illinois, spent many years in Europe and finally settled down in Cuba, but it was in writing about Africa—where he was feared today to have lost his life—that he expressed some of his deepest feelings.

He vowed to return to the Dark Continent when he was last there 20 years ago. In "The Green Hills of Africa," published in 1933 by Charles Scribner's Sons, he wrote: "I would come back to Africa but not to make a living from it. I could do that with two pencils and a few hundred sheets of the cheapest paper. But I would come back to where it pleased me to live; to really live. Not just to let my life pass."

Hemingway, who always liked the sun and sea and outdoor life, summed it up this way in "The Green Hills": "I have loved country all my life; the country was always better than the people. I could only care about people a very few at a time."

"I knew a good country when I saw one," he said. "Here there was game, plenty of birds, and I liked the natives. Here I could shoot and fish. That, and writing, and reading, and seeing pictures were all I cared about doing."

Reed Urges More Tax Cuts Soon In Drive Toward Pre-Korea Level.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Chairman Daniel A. Reed of the House Ways and Means Committee today proposed a new income tax cut "in the near future" as part of a "gradual" plan to slash all taxes to pre-Korea levels.

The New York Republican also spoke out against President Eisenhower's request that Congress postpone a 5 per cent drop in corporation taxes scheduled for April 1. Reed said tax cuts are needed to "stimulate the growth of industry."

The President's proposal was endorsed, however, by House Speaker Joseph W. Martin Jr. (Mass.). He said he saw "no other way" except to postpone the cut in both corporation and excise levies. But he hoped some excise taxes "in the higher brackets" could be trimmed.

Martin said on the Gannett News Service radio program Capital Memo that he thought no industry should be asked to carry an excise tax of more than 10 per cent. Some excise levies run as high as 20 per cent.

Simultaneously, Chairman John Taber (R-N.Y.) announced that his House Appropriations Committee will recruit about 20 financial experts from private business to help cut Eisenhower's new money requests and perhaps balance the budget.

Reed expressed his tax views in the weekly newsletter, "What's Happening in Washington," published by Prentice-Hall, Inc.

He noted that his committee has been working on a general tax overhaul.

Reed said the "next objective" is a "return to the pre-Korea rate

'ALL OF US WILL DIE' Latest Article Lauds His 'White Hunter'

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—The most recent published writing by Ernest Hemingway appears in the current issue of Look magazine, dated Jan. 26, and deals with the initial weeks of what was to be a five-month journey through East Africa.

The novelist and his wife were feared dead in the crash of a chartered plane yesterday in northwest Uganda.

The article, "Safari," with numerous photos, deals with the first five weeks of a jungle jaunt which ranged 2,000 miles through the wild Masai country of southern Kenya.

TRUCK, JEEP, ON FOOT

The trip was made by truck, hunting car, jeep and on foot.

Accompanying the author were his wife, Mary, a Cuban friend, a white hunter, a game ranger, a Look photographer, and native scouts and attendants.

For Hemingway it was a return after 20 years to the scenes dealing with two of his literary triumphs, "The Green Hills of Africa" and "The Snows of Kilimanjaro."

"The mountain (Kilimanjaro) did not show itself for three weeks," Hemingway wrote in the Look article. "Then one morning it was there and it looked nothing like the snows of Zankou. There was not even much snow. But there was all we needed."

DIRECTED MOVIE

Darryl Zanuck directed the movie of Hemingway's "Kilimanjaro."

The Hemingways hunted only lions which, with the drought, had become cattle and man-killers. Describing his stalking of one of the beasts, Hemingway wrote: "Tawny, long and deadly, she lay there while her mate slunk away into the high grass."

On one occasion Hemingway killed a rhinoceros at the invitation of a game ranger, who told the author the rhino had been wounded earlier and was too dangerous to be allowed to live.

'CAME AT A TROT'

Of this incident, Hemingway wrote:

"He (the rhino) came at a trot that turned into a gallop. I let him come much further than it was good for either of us in order to be truly sure."

"As the .377 fired he whirled with the shot and you could not see him in the rising red dust. . . . Outside game reserves, wild animals run both ways. Wounded rhinos run one way—right at you."

Hemingway apparently did his other hunting with a camera, including "shots" of animals at night.

"At night it is another world," he wrote. "All the beasts that never show themselves in the daylight have their life at night."

"I had always thought that night was Our Lord's gift to blind men but it is the happiness and freedom of the animals that have eyes too valuable to expose to the light

Ike Ready To Offer Housing Experiment

No Down Pay, 40-Yr. Loans
For Low-Price Homes Studied

By STERLING E. GREEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—President Eisenhower will propose to Congress tomorrow a many-sided attack on the housing problem, with emphasis on private industry's role in providing decent homes for low income families.

The Eisenhower budget carries funds to start 35,000 units of public housing in the 12 months starting July 1, the rate now authorized. But officials said the President also will urge an "experimental" federal financing plan to make the ownership of modest, privately built homes so easy that subsidized housing ultimately may become unnecessary.

HOME REPORT

Tomorrow's special message, it was reported, will follow in principle this and most other recommendations made last month in the report of the President's 23-man advisory committee headed by Housing Administrator Albert M. Cole.

That report suggested a two-year trial of a new Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance on houses costing under $8,000 or $9,000, with no down payment and 40 years to pay.

Housing officials believe this plan could make monthly payments on new dwellings as reasonable as moderate rent—if builders were interested in putting up houses in that price bracket and if banks were encouraged to lend on those liberal terms.

Eisenhower's message may modify some details, administration aides reported. The budget message last week, they noted, contained a reference to "small down payments" in connection with the test program.

ARGUE SHIFTS

This and several other recommendations of the advisory committee, officials said, were still being debated by White House advisers right up to the weekend.

The presidential message is expected to ask congressional authorization for:

1. Liberalized FHA loan insurance to help owners repair and remodel aging houses.
2. Federal loans and grants to cities to assist a new "urban renewal" program aimed not only at cleaning out slums but preventing them from developing.
3. A lease-and-purchase plan whereby FHA, by liberal mortgage insurance terms, would encourage the erection of rental homes which occupants could buy without down payment when the family income improves.
4. FHA financing terms as liberal for used houses as for new dwellings.
5. A reorganization of the government's housing agencies, giving Cole's Housing and Home Finance Agency clear supervisory power but no operating duties.

The President was expected to offer a compromise for one issue on which the housing industry is split down the middle. This is a plan to remove the government from the business of buying and selling mortgages to support housing credit.

OPPOSE HELP

Spokesmen for lenders on the advisory committee wanted the government entirely out. The builders wanted the government to stay very much in the picture, since they feared that shortages of housing credit might otherwise develop when money was tight. The lenders won in the advisory committee; its majority recommended creation of a new "National Mortgage Marketing Assn.," federally chartered but privately financed to replace the government's Federal National Mortgage Assn.

FNMA's function is to make housing mortgages an attractive investment for banks and other lenders. It has stood ready to purchase mortgage paper from the lenders. As a result, banks were encouraged to make mortgage loans, since they could always turn the mortgage into cash and thus bolster their funds for new investment.

Aussie Paper Says It Put 'Bomb' On Comet Carrying Butler Home

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 24 (AP)—The Sydney Sunday newspaper Truth claimed today it made monkeys out of airport security officers by planting a "time bomb" aboard the plane taking British Chancellor of the Exchequer R. A. Butler home from empire finance talks here.

The "bomb" was really an alarm clock, wrapped up in brown paper, and it ticked away merrily without anyone noticing it. Truth, pointing out that experts say the British Comet which crashed near Elba two weeks ago could have been shattered by a bomb explosion, commented: "It could happen here."

"Luckily for Butler, the 'bomb' was merely an alarm clock, but for all anyone knew it could have been an infernal machine which could have blown Butler and the plane's passengers and crew to smithereens somewhere over central Australia," said Truth.

The paper said the air line clerks accepted the parcel without inspection, even though it was ticking loudly.

IN INDOCHINA

Operation 'Atlanta' Rips Reds

TUY HOA, Indochina, Jan. 24 (AP). Battle-tested French veterans of the Korean War today spearheaded a break-through in Communist Vietnam defenses around this newly won beachhead on the South Indochinese coast in the first major clash of "Operation Atlanta." Heavy red losses were reported in close-quarter fighting.

The operation marked the first appearance on the battlefields of Indochina of members of the French battalion which helped hurl back the Communist Chinese and North Korean invaders of South Korea.

The battalion arrived in Indochina from Korea three months ago and was built up to regimental strength by volunteers. It spearheaded a multi-pronged thrust today into the Red-held limestone hills surrounding Tuy Hoa in a bid to assure the French hold on this strategic port and communications center.

In bitter close-quarter fighting, for which the French United Nations contingent was noted in the Korean war, the regiment cracked the Red Indochinese defenses and captured a Vietnam encampment to the west of Tuy Hoa.

Tuy Hoa was seized by seaborne commandos in a surprise attack Thursday. "Operation Atlanta" is designed to liberate some 3,000,000 natives after seven years of Communist domination.

George Hopes Congress Approves Reciprocal Trade Act Extension

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Sen. George (D-Ga.) said today he hoped Congress would agree to a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreements program, as recommended by the Commission on Foreign Economic Policy.

The 17-member commission, created by Congress last year, turned in a bulky, controversial report yesterday recommending a broad program to promote freer world trade.

One of its key proposals was a three-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, with authority for the President to lower existing tariff rates as much as 5 per cent each year in negotiations with other nations.

STUDY OF PROPOSALS

George, senior Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, said he was sure Congress would not be able to consider all the commission's recommendations this year but expressed hope the trade agreements program would be extended for three years.

Last year the lawmakers voted only a one-year extension of the program, which was initiated in the early 1930's. George said in an interview that such stop-gap extension "keeps everything unsettled."

The commission, under the chairmanship of Clarence B. Randall of Chicago, chairman of the board of the Inland Steel Co., was composed of five senators, five House members and seven representatives of the public named by President Eisenhower.

Whatever tariff changes the President proposes will first have to run the gauntlet of the House Ways and Means Committee, whose chairman, Rep. Reed (R-NY), attacked the commission's report as "vague, indefinite and unsatisfactory."

ROUGH SLEDDING

Reed was joined in his criticism by Rep. Simpson (R-Pa), another top-ranking member of the Ways and Means Committee. They were among the five House members who served on the Randall commission.

Their dissenting statement said the report "contemplates only the opening up of American markets to give larger shares to producers in foreign countries, with resulting smaller shares to our own producers."

GOP Chiefs' 'Last-Ditch' Plea With Bricker Fails

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Republican hopes of averting a party-splitting fight on the controversial Bricker amendment dipped lower tonight when last-minute efforts failed to produce a compromise.

Bricker said after a meeting with congressional leaders at his hotel suite that he will press for House and Senate approval of his amendment "as is."

President Eisenhower has labeled the proposed constitutional change, which would limit the chief executive's treaty-making powers, as completely unacceptable in its present form.

Senate debate on the measure is scheduled to get underway Tuesday or Wednesday, however, and Republican leaders have been working feverishly behind the scenes in an effort to reach a compromise.

Some of them had called today's meeting a "last-ditch" effort.

Participants in the highly-secret meeting refused to disclose what went on.

Those present included Chairman Homer Ferguson (Mich.) of the Senate GOP Policy Committee.

Coffee Consumers Face More Shocks

Consumers are screaming to high heaven about the increased price of coffee. Being confirmed addicts ourselves, we wholeheartedly sympathize and want the price to go down instead of up.

Unfortunately, the economic facts of life say that we've seen nothing yet. In fact, the price is expected to continue to increase during the coming year perhaps to as high as $1.25 per pound.

The reason is simple enough and we might as well try to understand it instead of blaming it on some conspiracy to fleece the poor consumer. Those who want to see the law of supply and demand function at all times have a perfect example.

The damage was done last July when frosts hit the coffee farms in Brazil and cut their production by one-fifth. That country supplies us with 50 per cent of our green coffee beans. Even before that, the growing world consumption had exceeded production for several years. The difference was made up from stocks piled up during the war. These stocks are nearing depletion. Demand is soaring.

What happened? A Wall Street Journal story points out that the price of a pound of coffee beans shot from about 57 cents in mid-November to a record 74 cents early this month. This is now being reflected in increases in the prices of roasted coffee at retail in varying amounts.

The average jump in the last few days has been three cents per pound. The price of green coffee has jumped far more than that, as these figures show, and the full impact will not be felt until the stocks of cheaper coffee now on hand begin to be exhausted.

At the present rate of consumption, says the Wall Street Journal survey, the world's coffee drinkers will consume about a million bags more than expected exportable production in the current crop year. That means further dwindling in stocks.

Granted that next year is a good crop year, coffee prices could go down in 1955. But at the present rate of production and consumption, high prices are with us for quite a while. Brazil and other producers no doubt will step up production. But it takes a coffee plant five years to produce a bean.

Of course, there's always the chance that the product could price itself out of the market and that lowly tea will get a break. But thus far there's no signs of it throughout the country. People are griping and still buying coffee. They are likely to do a lot more of the former before there is a change.

Don't like it? Well, there is tea. It provides the same effect.

Berlin Conference Is Climax of Frustrations

The meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers that opens today in Berlin is not likely to produce many concrete results. The mere fact of negotiations, however, will place the issues that divide the East and West into clearer perspective.

The conference should give the West some inkling of any new trends in Soviet foreign policy. It should reveal, if anything, whether there is any more chance of agreement than there has been over the past miserable and frustrating decade of trying to get along with the Russians.

The Reds will want to talk about everything except the real purpose of the conference, whether there is any possibility of achieving a united Germany. They will bargain and haggle over small points, but their aim is likely to remain the same. Their big objectives are still to prevent German integration into the Western defense setup and to split the United States from its allies.

At this session the Russians will be facing a more formidable array against them than at any previous meeting. The West, led by the United States, will negotiate from a position of strength and with renewed confidence. Communist weakness in Germany, demonstrated in the East German riots and in the overwhelming re-election of Chancellor Adenauer, contributes to that strength.

Secretary Dulles went to Berlin to further the cause of peace. Failing that, his mission is to demonstrate to the world that it is the Soviet Union and not the United States that obstructs the road thereto.

Troup County Police Will Do Better Job

Sheriff Lem Bailey of Troup County is a progressive man. The sheriff has taken a step toward better law enforcement in his bailiwick.

On his recommendation the Troup

Board of Commissioners has ordered uniforms for the sheriff's staff.

Sheriff Bailey asked for the uniforms in order to improve traffic law enforcement. He realizes that motorists have a right to question the identity of the man in plain clothes who would stop them on the highway.

Highway patrol by men in uniform will encourage better compliance with the law and build good will for Troup County.

In any county, putting the sheriff's department and the county police in uniform will work toward those objectives. Besides, positive by-sight identification of a man as a police officer should promote not only more willing cooperation from the public, but also proper behavior on his part in public places.

New England Talks Of 'Fair Competition'

Sen. Kennedy of Massachusetts applauds a proposal approved by the House Ways and Means Committee that would make interest on "industrial development bonds" issued by state and local governments subject to federal taxes. The measure, of course, is aimed at the South.

We doubt that it will have much effect, even if passed by the House. Such bonds have played small part in the industrial growth of the South. But as a prophecy of like measures to come, it is well to take note.

The action is applauded, too, by Walter Raleigh, executive vice president of the New England Council, who says: "We think the South's industrial development should be done in accordance with the accepted principles of free enterprise."

Let's pause right here. Is it free enterprise to prohibit the development of a section by government interference? Is it fair to clamp restrictive legislation on a section's growth?

New England should know. For more than a century the South felt the whiplash of that region's "fair competition" and her methods of enriching New England pocketbooks through restrictions on Southern progress imposed by the Federal Government.

New England should know, indeed! About freight rates, tariff laws, subsidies, tax favors and monetary policies that kept a dynamic section of the nation in chains as long as it was within her power!

We believe and we most devoutly hope that those days are gone forever.

The Atomic Bomb Speaks A Universal Language

The International Business Machines Corporation's newest brain child has passed its first examination in foreign languages. The electronic "brain" has translated Russian polysyllables into plain English.

A pretty operator fed the machine "Mi pyeryedayem mislyi posyedyetvom ryechi" and it came out "We transmit our thoughts by speech."

The IBM automatic linguist is a marvel, a wonder of the age and at least 30 years too late for those of us who once sweated out the translation of "All Gaul, etc."

But it still has nothing on the A-bomb which takes brave words like those recent ones of Secretary Dulles and translates them into language that any aggressor nation can understand.

Tribute Paid Five Who Didn't Yield

There has been much discussion as to the judgment that should be passed on fighting men who were taken captive in Korea and who weakened under threats, hardships or torture. Those who have never faced what they faced may well be hesitant in criticizing them. No one of us knows in advance how much he can stand. Not all of us are born with the physical and moral courage needed to endure and exist under conditions of captivity and we cannot always acquire what we are not born with.

But whatever we think of those who yielded to their captors to save themselves pain or to gain privileges, there is no confusion at all as to those who did not yield. Secretary of the Navy Robert Anderson has conferred decorations in a Pentagon ceremony on five marines who stubbornly refused, in the words of the citation, "to bear false witness against their country."

These are not the only five men to deserve this honor, but they were selected after a rigorous examination of their records. Their names will be forgotten by most of us, but it is good to let them be read off once more: Lt. Col. William G. Thrash and John N. McLaughlin, M/Sgt. John T. Cain, Maj. Walter R. Harris and Capt. John P. Flynn Jr.

Perhaps the memory of these five men and what they and others did will put courage some day into someone else fighting hard to save his conscience and his soul.

Statistics Cited as Proof Negro Teachers Fare Ill in Unsegregated School Systems

Blue Mountain, Miss.—Collateral to the school teacher situation is the question of how the Negro teachers will fare under unsegregated school systems.

If southern states follow the example of unsegregated states, Negro teachers will suffer.

From a study of census facts of all states the following facts appear: North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia employ more Negro teachers than all the other states combined.

South Carolina alone employs more Negro teachers than 10 of the northern industrial states including the three most populous. Yet the combined Negro population of these 10 states exceeds the Negro population of South Carolina by more than a million.

New York according to the 1950 census has 918,000 Negroes but employs less than 3,000 Negro teachers. South Carolina with 822,000 Negroes employs 8,845 Negro teachers.

Erle Cocke Jr. Cited As Potential Candidate

Atlanta.—With all that has been said and written to date about who would make the best successor to Herman Talmadge as Governor of Georgia, I think there is one in particular among those frequently mentioned as a "potential candidate" who stands out head and shoulders above the rest. I refer to Erle Cocke, Jr., of Dawson, Georgia.

Erle Cocke possesses all these qualities—ability, experience, background, leadership, character, personality, energy—and I firmly believe Georgia would be missing a golden opportunity for continued progress and future greatness if she failed to press this fine young man into public service.

Banded Birds Carry the Gospel

The Tribune-News at Cartersville says the bird was a duck and that it weighed 14 pounds. George Gantt, an outdoor sportsman who knows about such things, says if it weighed that much, it was a goose. Whatever it was, Bill Harvey of Cartersville shot it on the Conasauga River. The fowl was banded and the attached information showed that it had been released by the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario, in 1939.

An additional inscription on the leg band was "1st Peter 5:7," the reference being to a Bible verse reading, "He careth for you." Bill Harvey wrote to the bird sanctuary in Canada and received from the manager, Manly Miner, a reply explaining that his late father, Jack Miner, started the practice of putting a Scriptural reference on the bands. The purpose was to propagate the gospel among the Eskimos and Indians, the thought being that those who found the bands would go to missionaries for an explanation.

A shoe store of which I once heard followed the custom of pasting a Bible verse in each pair of shoes sold. A customer came in one day and found a good fit in Oxford, but she said the price indicated that the quality was lower than was fitting her station.

The clerk excused himself, carried the shoes to the rear, placed them in another box which carried a higher mark. He returned to the front of the store to explain here was a model at a higher price. The customer purchased, paid and left pleased.

The manager, who had carefully watched the transaction, went over to the clerk and said, "Pray tell me, what Scriptural passage did you find to fit that situation?"

"It was easy," said the clerk. "I was a stranger and ye took me in."

Gibraltar Serves Franco's Purpose

The students of Madrid are demonstrating again about Gibraltar. They want it returned to Spain by the British. The British, with the help of the Dutch, picked it up in an unguarded moment in 1704, and with real bulldog tenacity have hung on since.

The great rock commands the entrance to the Mediterranean and has been a fortified point since the days of the first trading fleets. It is honeycombed with batteries, galleries, ammunition storage and reservoirs of water and food.

It is a priceless bastion of empire, a strong link in the chain that connects the little home island with the far-flung territories that owe allegiance to the crown.

Gibraltar has served the Spaniards too. By losing it they gained something in return, an issue that never fails. Gibraltar is to Spanish politicians as states' rights and segregation are to ours. Whenever things slow down at home, whenever a cause seems doomed, or the people appear to be losing their faith in and affection for the government, the question of Gibraltar is revived. It usually is good for a series of demonstrations, a resurgence of national pride, and a hate Britain binge.

When the Spaniards grow weary of hating Britain, they can always hate France. Napoleon's occupation of the country has not been forgotten. It is modern Spanish history's equivalent of the Reconstruction and military occupation of the South. Today's tourists in Spain inspect old palaces and churches. Some of them show signs of damage, not from the civil war of the thirties, but the French occupation of more than a century ago. The tourist finally gets the idea these ruins are cherished and deliberately left unrepaired.

A Spanish guide points to a monument, slightly chipped around the edges. He lifts his chin, his eyes grow hard. He points with his finger.

"Broke by French," he intones, "in days of Napoleon."

Gibraltar casts its shadow over the straits that separate Europe and Africa. It shadows Madrid politics too, and General Franco has become very adept at using it.

All in all Gibraltar in British hands is more valuable to Franco than it would be in his own. To Spaniards it is a symbol of a wrong, of something to hate, and it is a lot easier to get people behind you against something than it is to unite them for constructive action.

Without the Gibraltar issue, Franco would have to find another drum to beat in the name of chauvinism and internal solidarity. The "broke by French in days of Napoleon" line still is a pretty good routine, but it is not in the same class with Gibraltar.

If the British do deed Gibraltar to Spain, an eventuality that seems most unlikely, they would be playing Franco a dirty trick. Without Gibraltar to talk about he would be as lost as a Southern demagogue deprived of the race issue.

Thinking of Christ Brings Mind Peace

Someone has asked me to give my answer to the question, "Who is Jesus?" That is a thrilling question, yet it is very difficult to put the answer into words. My first thought was to read some of my books to see how others have said it, but even in my small personal library there are so many books about Him that I could not read them all in a year. The poets, historians, philosophers, theologians, novelists have all sought to say who Jesus is. Instead of trying to select a book to read, I felt impressed to sit for a time and just think about Him.

One by one the pictures of Him in my mind began coming into view. I saw a lovely young mother sitting in a stable by a manger. I saw a young man living in a tiny village, playing with other boys, going to school, working in a little carpenter's shop.

Maybe Joseph died while Jesus was still a boy. There were other children in the home. Maybe the support of the family fell on His shoulders. Without knowing exactly how I got that picture, it is the one I have.

It was not until He was thirty years of age that He was freed from His family responsibilities and could go out and preach. He loved to read and may have regretted that He did not get the opportunity of a college education.

For three years He walked about the countryside preaching to those who would listen. He must have been a lonely man. Though He made close friends and, at times, was surrounded by multitudes of people, still in every man there is a deep longing for a home, for a woman he loves, for little children to call his own. Jesus never had that.

After a while the crowds turned against Him, one of His friends

Secrecy Is Right On Security Risks

WASHINGTON.—The Eisenhower Administration is 100 per cent right in resisting the campaign undertaken by some Trumanite newspaper writers to force a public disclosure of the nature of the 2,200 cases involving employees who in the last 12 months have been separated from government service for security reasons.

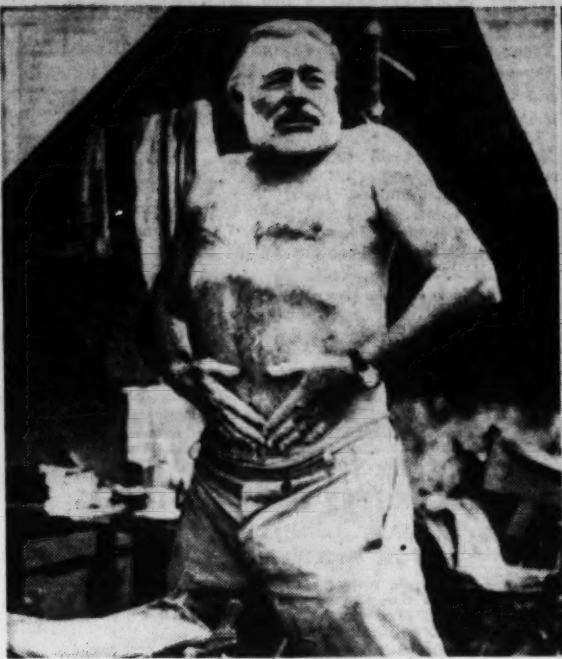

The attempt is significant because it comes from the so-called "liberal" group which is usually the first to denounce "smearing" tactics and "character assassination."

When the Eisenhower Administration came into power it decided to try to avoid such a formal characterization as "disloyalty" except in cases involving actual espionage or treason. So all doubtful cases were ordered to be investigated under one general heading—"security." The broad term was to be used to cover all types of security risks.

Not satisfied with this generous treatment of all security risks in an omnibus classification, some of the newspaper critics now have set out to compel disclosure of a "breakdown." They claim that only a small per cent of the cases involved so-called "loyalty" matters and that a misleading impression is given by the 2,200 figure. That's a customary maneuver here to force information into the open.

The so-called "liberals" can't have it both ways—they cannot insist that innocent persons shall not be smeared and yet be parties themselves to a process which inevitably must lead to disclosure of all the sordid facts about some of those employees in the government who have done improper things either in their repeated contacts with Communist sympathizers or who may become potential security risks in the future because of personal habits involving abnormal behavior in the past.

The Eisenhower Administration sees no good cause to be served by giving out the exact number of homosexuals, the exact number of drunkards, and the exact number of persons about whom there is reasonable doubt as to their future loyalty. After all, the quest for percentages is spurious on its face anyway. For it takes only one Alger Hiss out of 20,000 employees in the State Department, only one Harry Dexter White out of many thousands of employees in the Treasury Department, and only one Klaus Fuchs in the entire Atomic Energy Project to injure the United States Government. It is a small percentage statistically, but nobody probably will ever know how many undetected contacts they had inside our government to carry on their work for the cause of Soviet Russia.

McCarthy Urges Expansion of Probes To Smash 'Inefficiency, Subversion'

By G. MILTON KELLY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.) said today Congress should expand its investigations of the government in 1954.

"Rather than a consolidation of (investigating) committees, as has been suggested by some," McCarthy wrote in an official report, "we can foresee only the need for expansion of the committees and continuation of their individual operations, which have proceeded efficiently to this date."

"These committees must continue to function in order to strengthen legislative protection against inefficiency and subversion and to diminish the advantage that spies and disloyal Americans have had."

SUMMARIZES YEAR
McCarthy signed that statement in a preface to the annual report of his all-Republican Senate Investigations subcommittee.

The report summarized in 55 printed pages a year of often stormy investigating activities. It contained no specific mention of clashes and near clashes with members of the Eisenhower administration, including the President himself, which sometimes were involved. But it declared intention to resume and press vigorously some of the inquiries which were sources of discord.

McCarthy made public the report on the eve of a scheduled meeting at which he says he hopes to induce Democratic senators to call off a boycott of the subcommittee which has lasted since July.

The report laid some stress on ammunition it offered for McCarthy's planned fight to (A) avert a threatened cut in his subcommittee's $200,000 budget and (B) to get the budget increased sharply later in the year.

The report said "the staff and resources of the subcommittee are severely limited" by the $200,000 total. McCarthy has said it should be raised to about $300,000 by late spring. The 1952 budget allowed by the Senate was $100,000.

CLAIMS SAVINGS
"Its (1953) expenditures were less than $200,000 . . . and yet, with such limitations in both staff and budget the subcommittee was successful in uncovering waste in various agencies of the government totaling millions of dollars," the report said. "It also caused steps to be taken resulting in savings of upward of 18 million dollars."

The subcommittee long has claimed credit for saving the $18 million by forcing the State Department to cancel contracts for construction of two big broadcasting towers for the Voice of America.

Much of the report reviewed findings made public in previous reports, including accusations of "multi-million" dollars of waste in the cold war propaganda-information program and the Federal Security Agency at home.

Hemingway's Wife Chided Article Plugging 'Safety, a Fickle Friend'

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (INS)—Ernest Hemingway, feared killed in a plane crash in East Africa yesterday, wrote in his last published article of an "excessive emphasis on safety, a fickle friend."

The statement, in an article for Look Magazine published two weeks ago, was a reference to a chiding remark by his wife, Mary, to a passage discussing how "safe" hunting in Africa can be. Hemingway wrote:

"(Nairobi), for a foreigner with no one with a grudge against him is safer than New York, five times safer than parts of Chicago and most certainly safer than Brooklyn, the Bronx, Central Park at night or Cooke City, Mont., on the date of the celebration of the old-timer's fish fry."

"The bush is perfectly safe for a white hunter. He has to belong to the White Hunter's Association and after being apprenticed and qualified, he is licensed and disciplined by them. After that he must present himself personally to the game department who can issue him a license or refuse it without explanation. If he ever had anything happen to you he'd never work again."

At this point in the manuscript, Hemingway wrote: "Interruption by Mary: 'This seems to be excessive emphasis on safety, a fickle friend.'"

WINS FREEDOM AND DIVORCE

Weds Man Who Cleared Her in Slaying Case

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 24 (AP)—Mrs. Emma Johnson, freed after serving two years and nine months in prison for a murder never committed, today married the man who had stood by her since her arrest.

Mrs. Johnson, 35, was granted a divorce yesterday from Russell Johnson, a sailor. She was married today to Jack Wengert, 40, a Las Vegas chef, in the home of private detective Glenn Bodell, who was employed by Wengert.

Bodell uncovered much of the evidence which finally freed Mrs. Johnson last Wednesday. In 1951 she was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to serve 10 to 12 years for the death at Las Vegas of her former landlady, Mrs. Jane Jones, 72.

The state had accused Mrs. Johnson of fatally beating Mrs. Jones during an argument. A year-long investigation by Wengert after Mrs. Johnson went to prison turned up medical evidence that Mrs. Jones died of a brain tumor and would have succumbed even if there had been no fight.

The couple had intended to be wed in Carson City, but bad weather forced them to cancel that arrangement. Mrs. Johnson and Wengert originally planned to be married in 1951.

Maugham appeared to be in perfect health. He said he hopes to go to Spain next spring "for the last time."

Maugham said he also hopes to go back to his estate in South Carolina.

Blood Bath Kills 3 and Wounds 4th

DENVER, Jan. 24 (AP)—A shotgun blood bath snuffed out the lives of three members of a family here this afternoon and left a fourth critically wounded.

Police said they were holding Frank Archino, 26-year-old laborer, without charge in connection with the slayings.

The dead were identified as Frank Machri, 64, and his wife, Elizabeth, 60, Archino's parents-in-law, and Frank A. Machri Jr., 25. In critical condition at Denver General Hospital was Archino's sister-in-law, Mary, 21, a daughter of the dead couple.

Officers, who termed the Machri home a "bloody nightmare," said the shootings climaxed a year-long family quarrel.

They and Mike Carbatta, a nephew of the elder Machri, told this story:

Archino and Rose Machri, a second daughter of the dead couple, were married in a double ceremony with his brother, Gene, and her sister, Mary, a year ago in Italy. Both couples then immigrated to the United States.

The couples moved into the Machri home. The Machris began pleading with them to re-marry in a church, since their Italian wedding was a civil ceremony. Patrolman Steve Mastin said the sisters, Rose and Mary, had been living in one upstairs bedroom and the Archino brothers in another.

Their frequent quarrelling over the re-marriage apparently broke out again at an afternoon luncheon. Mastin, one of the first to arrive, found the elder Machri dead in a hallway and the son, Frank Jr., on the dining room floor, critically wounded. He later died in a hospital.

Mrs. Machri was in a bedroom closet, the top of her head blown off. Mary Archino was nearby with a charge through the chest and abdomen, and her right arm nearly severed. The second daughter, Rose, apparently escaped injury only because she covered herself the other two women when they rushed to the closet for safety.

Archino was arrested in a tavern three blocks from the home, officers said.

21 PWs Devise Race To Insult West Chiefs

PANMUNJOM, Monday, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Communists continued their angry war prisoner charges against the United Nations today while the 21 American PWs who gave up their country echoed Red hatred of the West.

The American soldiers invented a relay race aimed at insulting Secretary of State Dulles and other Western leaders as the Reds accused the Allies of planning to torture and murder some of the 21,000 released anti-Communist captives.

As the Reds carried on their word barrage, the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission scheduled a meeting for this morning to discuss "PW matters."

One of the items to be discussed is what to do about the 347 pro-Communist prisoners, including the Americans, who refuse to budge from their ice-cold neutral zone compound.

Indian officers revealed that the pro-Communist Americans have devised a new game to while away their time in their white mud hut compound on the Red side of the neutral zone.

They line up in five track lanes facing paper bags decorated with caricatures of Dulles, South Korean President Syngman Rhee, Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek, West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Japanese Premier Shigeru Yoshida.

The self-exiled Americans then run a hundred yards, swat the caricature in their lane and dash back to the starting line to hand the relay baton to the next runner.

The race ends when the paper dummies fall apart.

Formosa Hails Ex-Red Chinese

TAIPEH, Formosa, Monday, Jan. 25 (AP)—The first batch of wounded. He later died in a hospital.

Mrs. Machri was in a bedroom closet, the top of her head blown off. Mary Archino was nearby with a charge through the chest and abdomen, and her right arm nearly severed. The second daughter, Rose, apparently escaped injury only because she covered herself the other two women when they rushed to the closet for safety.

Archino was arrested in a tavern three blocks from the home, officers said.

Kremlin Rebuffs Mao On Plea for More Goods

LONDON, Jan. 24 (AP)—The Kremlin has told Peiping that Soviet industry cannot fulfill all Red China's demands for vital tools and machinery, Western diplomats reported today. The Russian action has dealt a sharp blow to Mao Tse-tung's five-year plan.

The Chinese trade mission now dickering in Moscow was said to have been informed that Russian factories are too hard pressed with home demands to meet many of Peiping's orders. These responsible sources think another factor may be that Mao just can't pay the bill for any substantial increase in Soviet exports.

DODGE BIG LOANS
The Russians have dodged making big loans to their Chinese allies and Peiping has been compelled to barter agricultural products for Soviet machinery, trucks and building equipment. Russia found she couldn't absorb all the stuff coming from China. Much to Mao's embarrassment, the Soviet Union and her European satellites have begun re-exporting at cut rate prices such Chinese products as hog bristles, soya beans, oil seeds and feathers.

Hedging on the payment question, the Kremlin is believed to have made its excuses for holding down on deliveries on the basis of these factors:

SATISFY ARMED FORCES
Soviet plants have been going full blast to satisfy the vast needs of the armed forces and the program for nationwide industrial expansion. Now on top of this, Premier Georgi Malenkov has called for a huge output of consumer goods like radios, shoes and sewing machines. As a result, nothing much is left over for export beyond the production already earmarked for Red China.

If these reports are true—and they are based on the best information available to the West—Mao will be compelled to cut back drastically on his scheme to industrialize Red China at high speed. The Chinese Communist press already has hinted that major snags in the plan have cropped up because of the shortage in resources and trained men.

Trade Agreement Signed, Tass Says

LONDON, Jan. 24 (INS)—The Russian news agency Tass said today that a new trade agreement has been concluded between Russia and Communist China.

Tass declared the trade agreement was reached Saturday after negotiations in Moscow.

The talks between the delegates was described by the news agency as being in an "atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding."

The Netherlands with 10½ million people on 12,505 square miles is the most densely populated nation in Europe, says the National Geographic Society.

WILLED DEATH — DETROIT, Jan. 24 — This frisky bulldog named Rex was condemned to death in the will of his owner, Moroni Crouch, who died last week. Crouch specified Rex should be destroyed because "he has no one to take care of him." Friends said they will fight the order.

Author Maugham, 80 Today, All for Frankness on Sex

LONDON, Jan. 24 (AP)—W. Somerset Maugham said today on the eve of his 80th birthday that one of the things that has pleased him most is that people are no longer as prudish as they once were and can discuss sex with an open mind.

"I do think the fact that people are now talking on all kinds of subjects that they weren't some years ago is all to the good," he said in a birthday interview.

"The relations between the sexes are much less constrained and I think that seems to be an admirable thing."

JARS PUBLIC

It was Maugham who jarred genteel readers a generation ago with his character Sadie Thompson. She started out as a character in a short story and became the central figure of his play "Rain," which was banned in many localities.

"Rain" is accepted almost everywhere now as a classic even though Sadie Thompson has become a byword for bawds wherever English is spoken.

Maugham said he does not expect to feel any different on his 80th birthday tomorrow than he does today but he admitted he doesn't look forward to the 90th.

"If I live 10 years longer, I shall have written all I ever want to write and after that it would be like hanging on at a theater after the curtain has gone down on the last act," he said.

FINE HEALTH
Maugham appeared to be in perfect health. He said he hopes to go to Spain next spring "for the last time."

Maugham said he also hopes to go back to his estate in South Carolina.

"I spent several winters down there and I like it very much indeed," he said. "I have a home and 1,000 acres of woodland about me."

Next to the English, he said, he feels himself most in sympathy with Americans. And he doesn't go along with people who are always giving America advice.

"America is a great country," he said. "Who am I to give Americans advice?"

Don't Fear Safety Code, Patrol Urges

By KEELER MCCARTNEY

The State Patrol is making feverish preparations to be ready for enforcement when the uniform traffic code goes into effect on March 12, but the driving public has little to fear from the change.

"There's nothing to it from the public standpoint," Col. W. C. Dorn, state director of public safety said. "Those who use common sense and caution and courtesy have been following the rules laid down in the safety code all along."

"The code will simply make it easier for us to catch up with those drivers who disregard common sense, courtesy and caution."

Superior officers from the patrol divisions in north Georgia are scheduled to arrive in Atlanta tomorrow to begin a study of the code sections, Dorn said. He said others from south Georgia will be brought up for a similar study Wednesday.

MARKING CARS

The code stipulates that all cars used for traffic law enforcement must be marked with letters five inches high, Dorn pointed out. He said the patrol is considering removable signs for cars assigned to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation and those attached to the Safety Education division which are called in for special patrol assignments on holidays.

One of the biggest problems goes to the highway department, which must change the highway speed law signs before the new measures can be enforced. Under the code, the day speed limit for autos is 60, the night limit 50, the bus limit 55 and the limit for trucks of over 16,000 pounds is 45.

Studies are being made of the sign system in use in Alabama, Dorn said. There the highway signs give a 60 miles per hour limit during the daytime, but through use of a special paint the "60" changes to a "50" when reflected on auto headlights at night.

SIGNS ERECTED

The highway department also is being asked to erect signs at least four by six feet on all the main highway entrances into the state listing the speed limits, Dorn said. He added these signs will carry the warning that highway speeds in Georgia are electrically timed.

Truckdrivers who crowd up behind the machine ahead without leaving sufficient clearance for safe passing for the first time will be in violation of the law.

"Sun day drivers" who "poke along a busy highway for no reason at all will be subject to arrest. Those whose hand signals establish only that the window is down on the driver's side will not be complying with the law. The code specifically calls for properly made hand signals.

Atlanta Temperature Sign Operated With 'Bike Chains'

By LEE FUHRMAN

How does it work?

Thousands of Atlantans, shivering in the cold and waiting for buses, have asked themselves that question upon checking the time and temperature on one of the nation's most impressive illuminated signs sparkling on Atlanta's own famous Peachtree Street.

The sign on a one-story building at Peachtree, Pryor and Houston streets day and night dominates one of the city's busiest downtown districts and has become a landmark known to virtually every resident.

FIRST OF KIND

The thermometer is the first of its kind ever built, with approximately 90 feet of stainless steel tape, one half the length painted red and the other half white, formed into a continuous belt.

Here's how the whole thing operates:

The belt is connected to two 90-foot lengths of bicycle chain, and the tape and chain run over sprockets at the top and bottom of the thermometer column.

A small thermo-couple unit picks up changes in temperature, and then impulses two motors which turn the sprockets and pull the tape up or down to the correct temperature readings on the thermo-meter.

PLASTIC FACE

The thermometer column face is made of white translucent plastic, with a clear section over the tape. Numerals and degree markings are of black opaque plastic.

Illumination is accomplished by using white neon tubing arranged to show through the plastic and also reflect on the tape. Approximately 277 square feet of plastic were used on the thermometer.

The clock mechanism is operated by a small motor which is President-Goodrich C. White's announcement of this progress was disclosed by the university yesterday.

Included in the estimate of progress was the first two million dollars of a seven-million-dollar grant made to Emory by the Rockefeller-supported General Education Board two years ago.

GEB FUNDS

The GEB funds were and are to be made available only as Emory progresses toward its 40-million-dollar goal, the announcement said.

Chief beneficiaries of the total increased funds will be the medical and graduate schools. The money will permit the school of medicine to stabilize, but not increase, its budget and erect a building for the Emory University Clinic.

The two - million - dollar endowment in GEB funds anticipated by the graduate school will allow it to step up its fellowship-assistantship program, employ expert teachers and make other improvements.

During the 1952-53 fiscal year the net worth of the university increased by $480,938 to a total valuation of $44,278,123, despite the donation of the plant of Emory-at-Valdosta to the State Board of Regents and the City of Valdosta.

OPERATES IN BLACK

Unlike most universities in the nation, Emory operated in the black in the 1952-53 year, with an income of $4,689,868 and expenditures of $4,670,119, for a net operating surplus of $19,749.

On Aug. 31, the close of the fiscal year, Emory had $25,683,007 in endowment funds, which have been increased by subsequent gifts.

During the fall of 1953 enrollment swung upward after a five-year decline. The student body numbered 3,148 or 8.8 per cent more than the year before. The big gainer was the college (21.3 per cent), including Emory-at-Oxford. Enrollment increased moderately in the graduate school, nursing and theology. Dentistry and medicine held fast while enrollment declined in business administration and law.

The year saw Emory go co-ed in all its divisions when the trustees voted that the College and Business Administration, the last surviving all-male units, might admit women.

Theology last year conferred more degrees than any other Methodist seminary in the land, and the graduates of business administration had an average of 30 to 40 job offers apiece, the university reported. The law school continued driving toward its goal of becoming a great regional institution.

BUILDING PROJECTS

Although there was not much new building construction on the Emory campus during 1953, three major building projects are expected to be started this year. These include a new administration building, two new dormitories and a building to house the new Emory University Clinic. Meanwhile, a new six-story addition to Harris Hall is nearing completion to increase the capacity of the women's dormitory.

NO MORE HELL WEEK—These are several of the 300 pledges of Georgia Tech fraternities who have decided to substitute a constructive "Help Week" for the often-destructive "Hell Week." Here they are shown painting the fence at Bellwood Community Center, one of their "Help Week" projects. They also painted playground equipment and interior of the center's buildings and 10 cottages at Mountain View Camp for Girls, jobs which would have taken one man working an eight-hour day six months to complete.

NEW HOSPITAL IN MAKING

Piedmont Will Expand Surgery

Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles about Piedmont Hospital, its past, present and future.

By KATHERINE BARNWELL

The proposed new $3,500,000 Piedmont Hospital to be erected on Peachtree road will have greatly expanded facilities for surgery—and the recovery of surgical patients.

Present plans call for four major and three minor operating rooms and a recovery room where patients will be closely watched after their operations.

The old Piedmont Hospital on Capitol Ave. has only three operating rooms plus rooms for tonsillectomies and a room for orthopedic work. There is no recovery room at the hospital and patients must be returned to their rooms after surgery.

SUPERVISION

Miss Genevieve Garren, superintendent of nurses at Piedmont, said supervision and nursing of scattered post-surgery patients is much more difficult than supervision of such patients in a recovery room.

More operating room space and facilities are needed by Piedmont doctors because the number of operations at the hospital has increased about 50 per cent in the past decade. In 1942, Piedmont Hospital had 2,991 surgical operations—and 10 years later, the number had jumped to 4,497.

Despite the expansion in services, Piedmont Hospital has had no expansion in hospital beds since 1932 when construction of an addition brought the total number for adults to the present 132.

OVERCROWDED

Dr. Thomas N. Guffin, chief surgical resident at Piedmont, said doctors cannot always find a bed at Piedmont for surgical patients. He said reservations often must be made weeks in advance.

Dr. Guffin said all types of surgery except heart surgery are done at the present Piedmont Hospital. He said Piedmont is one of only three hospitals in the state that have four-year residency training programs in surgery. Five residents are being trained in surgery at Piedmont at the present time, he noted.

A surgical patient is admitted to Piedmont the day before the scheduled operation. A case history and a thorough physical examination are made. X-rays are taken and a series of laboratory tests are made. Every precaution possible is taken to make certain the patient is able to undergo the operation.

CHARITY SERVICE

Some surgical patients unable to pay for necessary operations are treated under the charity service at Piedmont. Most of these patients are from areas outside Fulton and DeKalb Counties, since Grady Hospital provides care for indigent patients in the two counties.

Lack of space at the old Piedmont also has prevented needed expansion of laboratory and X-ray facilities. There is no room for an outpatient department or a cancer clinic, both of which should be built.

Virus Strikes 67 Students At Dahlonga

By JIMMY WALKER

Constitution Staff Writer

DAHLONGA, Jan. 24—State health officials were still trying Sunday to find the cause of an "outbreak" of nausea which struck 67 North Georgia College students, touching off fear in this mountain-top community of typhoid germs in the town's water supply.

Suspicion of typhoid arose when it was reported heavy rains had seeped into water mains, by-passing the filter plant.

However, Dr. J. E. McCroan Jr., assistant director of epidemiology for the state, said that no evidence of "gross contamination" or that typhoid germs were present in water samples taken from different points in the town.

The outbreak, termed a "virus diarrhea" by Dr. McCroan, sent 40 students to the college infirmary and 27 others reported a similar illness and stayed in their rooms.

The rapidity with which the students were stricken indicated a common source, he added, but no bacterial cause has been determined.

Samples taken from the school's cafeteria and questionnaires circulated among the student body are being studied in state health laboratories, he said.

"There is absolutely no indication that it came from mismanagement by college authorities either through food or water," the doctor concluded.

Farewell to Football

Sometime in the pitch black of the Sunday side of Saturday night, Atlanta pulled the covers over its head to sleep off the final after-effects of one more football season. For the football bear, genus Atlantus, hibernation had set in.

Extensive studies of his living habits, however, have shown that the football bear of the local belt is a fitful hibernator. He snorts and tosses restlessly and appears in a constant fret in the dormant months of January to September. And when the awakening does come, he explodes from his cave, into the stadium with pennant waving, and proceeds to fill the autumn air with bloodcurdling noises.

He has been proven to be, however, a relatively harmless animal. His noises are far more fierce than his actions. He thrashes about and fumes and wonders why and attacks and hates the coach and loves the coach and curses the dolt who sold him season tickets on the 35-yard line because his gin rummy partner got seats on the 40.

When the playing is done, he's like a boxer who tries to disembowel his opponent while the fight's on, then smothers him with affection when it's done. He'll sit down to the groaning board, eat, drink and be hospitable to the coach and the athletes and the athletic board and the dolt who sold him the 35-yard line tickets, and is properly amused or moved by the speaker.

It's not that he's a changed man. He's just mellowing over the temporary departure of an old friend. He is the football bear, a man whose union is the Touchdown or Quarterback Club, and here, it was the Touchdown Club that said the benediction over the weekend in Atlanta.

The Squeeze on Blue Bell

In a sense, it was a shade tamer than usual, and several shades less devoted to football than a year ago, when platoon consternation had gripped the village.

This time, the official benediction was in itself a departure. Con McCole's was the first football oration I ever heard that sidestepped football. This pious former mayor ("You're a former mayor if you retire; you're an ex-mayor if you get defeated," explained Bill Hartsfield, somewhat of an authority on mayors) of Wilkes-Barre ran through a routine as Irish as Paddy's pig, from a fictitious Tom Dolan to a real live Steve O'Neill without telling a football yarn. They were ticklers, but not football.

To some this was good, and to some it was ranking. But to all there was no escaping the humor of such yarns as the one about Blue Bell, a race horse. A wagster who had made many trips to the same mutuels window getting down his wad on Blue Bell was stopped cold about the fifth trip by the seller.

"Blue Bell isn't going to win the race," the seller said smugly. "And why not?" asked the plunger.

"Because I own Blue Bell, and he isn't going to win the race," said the seller.

"Well, it's going to be a helluva slow race," said the plunger, "because I own the other four horses."

Mike Wade, He Had Control

There was, for a fact, just about nothing new out of this festival, mostly communion and fellowship. The young men who came to dinner for trophies, John Carson, Jackie Parker, Mike Anderson and Joe DeLany, scored with youthful appeal rather than recitation. Erskine Russell, who discovered Grady High School's first state title, heaved to the line and said somebody else should have been Coach of the Year, and that he owed it all to his scholars, his assistants and good officiating.

Even when they handed out the bowl prizes it was like seeing a movie the second time. Irwin Poche, the Sugar Bowl president, stood up just as he had done a year ago and said nice things about Georgia Tech just as he had done a year ago and presented Bobby Dodd the trophy just as he had done a year ago. But in every way it was pleasant as a church picnic, though past the pleasantness the similarity ended.

For the fellow who's leaning a little toward spring training, there was one zesty item to warm up the baseball blood. "They say that Herb Pennock was the greatest control pitcher that ever lived," said Wilkes-Barre wit McCole. "But he wasn't."

"The greatest control pitcher that ever lived was Mike Wade, who pitched for the Anthracite Miners. Mike only walked one man in four years, and that was his wife's brother. He came to bat with men on first and third and 'two out and the score tied and Mike didn't want to let him get a hit. So he walked him to keep peace in the family.'"

Tech Tries at Murray; Another Quiet Week

By JIMMY MANN

Classroom tests will again cut down on the Southeastern Conference basketball activity this week. Only six games were reeled off in the loop last week and the same number is on tap for the next six days.

Georgia Tech and Mississippi State step out of the family for games Monday and Wednesday nights. Tech goes to Murray State Teachers College in Murray, Ky., to-night, and Wednesday the Marooners are at Howard College.

LSU still has technical command of the league with a perfect rating against four SEC foes. Kentucky, the nation's No. 1 outfit, is in second place in its own conference with a 3-0 SEC chart.

Frank Ramsey proved that the Wildcats aren't dependent on one man Saturday night when he took over scoring honors in the Wildcats' massacre of Tennessee, 97-71, for the injured Cliff Hagan. Hagan left the game in the first period and returned late. He played just 17 minutes and was held to nine points, his lowest total this season.

Even considering Ramsey's dependability, Coach Adolph Rupp isn't sorry that the slate is light because it was announced last night that Hagan will be sidelined for about 10 days. This period covers Saturday's engagement with Vanderbilt, but it is expected that The Cat will see action in that game, if needed.

Auburn raised its stock in the conference this past week by downing two league customers, Georgia Tech and Georgia, to move into a fifth place tie with Vandy.

Tulane and Mississippi are sitting right behind Kentucky in the No. 3 spot. Tulane passed its one league exam last Monday night with Tennessee, 63-61. Mississippi had one successful outing at Vanderbilt Monday, 78-74.

Vandy bounced back and stunned winless Tech Saturday night, 84-65.

Below the Plainsmen and Commodores in sixth place is Mississippi State with a 2-2 record.

Florida is seventh with a 1-2 record. Georgia and Tennessee come next with 1-4 marks and Tech is holding up the conference with no decisions in six tries.

The Yellow Jackets can break their winless SEC habit on their home floor Saturday night against Tennessee.

This week's schedule: Monday—Georgia Tech at Murray (Ky.) State. Tuesday—No games. Wednesday—Mississippi State at Howard College. Thursday—No games. Friday—Auburn at Florida. Saturday—Tennessee at Georgia Tech. Alabama at Georgia. Kentucky at Vanderbilt. Mississippi at Tulane. Mississippi State at LSU.

Gloves Tournament Opens at Marietta

Atlanta's Clifford Penn
Enters Light Heavy Class

By GENE ASHER

Clifford Penn, Greater Atlanta's "most outstanding boxer," is among 70 contenders who will campaign in the state Golden Gloves tournament which opens tonight at Marietta's Larry Bell Park Auditorium.

Penn, a member of the U.S. Army who was reported to have been transferred out of the Atlanta General Depot, will represent Atlanta in the light heavyweight division along with Jake Whitfield, who lost to Penn in the Greater Atlanta finals.

Other light heavies for the three-day eliminations will be Savannah's Georgia Kartalian, an Eastern and Southern Inter-collegiate champion from Syracuse, and LaGrange's Clinton Hollis.

Teams from Atlanta, LaGrange, Rome and Griffin checked in for yesterday's initial weigh-in and fighters from Athens and Savannah are scheduled to arrive this afternoon.

Five defending champions, Ken Pruitt (118), Ed Morgan (135) and heavyweight Herschel Burkhalter of Atlanta; Ed Hester (147) of LaGrange and Curtis Phillips (160) of Rome will put their crowns on the line.

Quantity-wise, most competition will be in the lightweight and welterweight divisions. Shooting for Ed Morgan's 135-pound title will be Bruce White (Griffin), Harold Morgan (LaGrange), Carl Christie and Tom Brown (Savannah) and Ronnie Jones (Athens).

Contenders for Phillips' crown are George Sadler (Atlanta), Jimmy Thacker (Rome), W. R. Davis (Savannah) and Bill Cannon (Athens).

Although final weigh-in is not until 2 p.m., at least three scraps are already guaranteed in the middleweight class.

In the 118-pound bantamweight division, only Stanley Warner of Savannah has challenged Southern titleholder Pruitt. And entries are light in the flyweight, featherweight and heavyweight classes, too.

Thirty-one boxers are signed up for novice activity, including Atlanta winners John Hall, Dewey Conner, Leroy Schofield, Joe Taylor and Lewis Beal.

Approximately 14 fights are scheduled for tonight's card, with the first one getting under way at 8 o'clock.

Open victors will represent Georgia in the Southern tournament at Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 15-17.

That was the signal for Frank Ramsey, the Wildcats' 6-3 guard, to take over. Ramsey has been playing pretty much in Hagan's shadow this year, even though he made plenty of all-America teams two years ago. The senior from Madisonville, Ky., has been playing well, averaging 18.5 for 11 games. But he didn't have to shoot the works until Saturday.

With high-scoring Hagan hobbled, Ramsey split the nets for 37 points, 17 in the third quarter when Kentucky scored only 21 in all. Ramsey's total, put together on 13 field goals and 11 free throws, was the highest one-night performance this week in the Southeastern Conference. And for his clutch shooting in powering the Wildcats to a 97-71 victory, their 12th straight, he's the Constitution's SEC Star of the Week.

Ramsey, who has already been drafted by the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association, didn't have an easy time winning the honor this week as two other performers made spirited bids.

The blond Kentucky star was handicapped because his team played only one game this week while Tennessee's Carl Wadsworth and Auburn's Bob Miller each saw action twice.

Wadsworth, a sophomore from Davenport, Iowa, was perhaps the most frustrated performer in the league. He scored 20 points Monday as the Vols bowed to Tulane, 63-61, and shot home 32 against Kentucky in another losing cause.

Miller, 6-6 Plainsman center, did all of his damage against Georgia teams. He got 20 as Auburn beat Tech, 80-56, and potted 18 Saturday with Georgia an 81-66 victim. His work under the boards was spectacular in both games.

Ramsey is the second Kentucky player to be honored this year. Hagan got a bid earlier. Other winners were Denver Brackeen of Mississippi, Jerry Harper of Alabama, Murphy McManus of Georgia and Bob Pettit of LSU twice.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—It is difficult to believe that Bill Terry's apparent indifference to his selection to the Baseball Hall of Fame was anything but a pose, as a man just can't help but feel a sense of gratification in the knowledge he is considered among the best in any line of endeavor.

Terry had been given what is known as a bad press, justified or not. Personally, we wouldn't know, as our dealings with the rugged individualist always were pleasant and you judge a man only by your own reaction to him.

That he was not unaware of the hostility is taken for granted, and he can imagine him saying to himself: "Well, if that's what they think of me, I'll play the part to the hilt." So his noncommittal attitude toward his selection was strictly in character. That's what was expected, so that's what he'd give them.

Terry definitely belongs in the Maranville, the irrepressible, laughing boy who never grew up and to whom life was an adventure rich in humor. Warm and vivid was the Rabbit, but his pious behavior could not conceal a real ability and determination where the actual playing of the game of baseball was concerned.

Terry, chilly and blunt and coldly calculating, frank enough to let it be known the sport was a means to an end with him, and demanding full payment for his carefully appraised performance. He was good, he knew he was good, he was in the game for money, and why shouldn't he get as much money as he could? It was as simple as that.

Dickey, slightly on the frosty, austere side. Not unduly friendly, but not unfriendly. Neutral might be the word. A coldly competent performer, doing everything with machine-like efficiency.

Dickey is the only one of the three we ever saw play, and our memory of him is that of a tall, erect man who handled his catching duties with the relaxed grace of a fine outfielder.

Sugar Bowl Tempting Irish With Long Pact

Reports Say Notre Dame Officials May End Bowl Ban and Sign 5-10-Year Contract

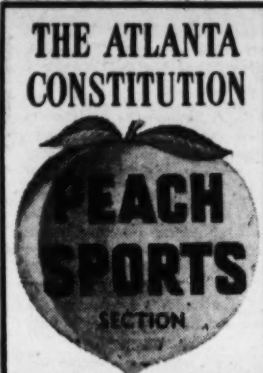

By FURMAN BISHER

The University of Notre Dame, previously allergic to post-season football, is about to enter into a long-term agreement with the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association to appear annually in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

From a source considered consistently reliable by The Constitution, it has been learned that officials at South Bend have been offered a five-to-ten-year contract and that the Irish are leaning toward acceptance.

This would represent a complete reversal of athletic policy at Notre Dame, whose administration has never condoned participation in post-season intercollegiate events. This would also, in effect, establish the Irish as the "home" team for the 20-year-old football classic, and at the same time remove the Sugar Bowl group from a hot spot that has grown increasingly hotter the past year.

Only once has Notre Dame ever played a bowl game. In 1928, while Knute Rockne was coach, the Irish defeated Stanford in the Rose Bowl, 27-10. There have been persistent efforts since to lure the team to other bowl games, but school fathers have just as persistently resisted.

It is understood that strong pressure is being brought to bear by Catholic forces in the predominantly Catholic New Orleans area. New Orleans and Notre Dame have developed a deep affection for one another over a period of years, and the New Orleans press has campaigned vigorously for an annual Irish football appearance in the city.

If the deal is consummated as reported, the hard-riding New Orleans newspaper critics would be removed from the back of the Mid-Winter sports group. For over a year, or since Georgia Tech's victory over Ole Miss Jan. 1, 1953, the Sugar Bowl has been the target of an extremely unfavorable local press. It reached a new peak in the wake of Tech's second successive appearance there last New Year's Day, and its subsequent 42-19 victory over a dull West Virginia team.

With Notre Dame as a steady attraction, the Sugar Bowl could continue to draw the other opponent from the Southeastern Conference and without fear of challenge claim the title as the outstanding bowl game in the nation. Currently, it and the Gator Bowl are the only two major New Year's Day classics without conference affiliations.

The Rose Bowl matches Pacific Coast and Big Ten opponents. The Orange Bowl matches Atlantic Coast and Big Seven conference teams. The Southwest Conference champion is the host in the Cotton Bowl game.

One member of the committee, who preferred to remain anonymous, said such a move could be made only with the sanction of the complete executive committee by a majority vote.

The poll revealed, however, that four members of the committee were in Atlanta over the weekend and were not expected here until late tonight.

At South Bend, Ed Krause, Notre Dame athletic director, said "there is absolutely nothing to it. Our policy, which is not bowl games, remains the same."

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif., Jan. 24 (AP)—National amateur champion Gene Littler, standing off the challenge of professional stars and a blistering rain, won the $15,000 San Diego open golf championship today with a final round par 72 and a 72-hole score of 274.

The 23-year-old native son of San Diego swept in by four strokes over E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Ardmore, Okla., who picked up the $2,400 top money. Littler won a five-piece silver tea set.

Littler, with a victory that marked the first by an amateur in a major tournament since Frank Stranahan won the Miami Open in 1948, toured through a drizzle of rain in 38-72 strokes. His 274 total was 14 strokes under par for the tournament route over the 6,800-yard Rancho Santa Fe Golf Club.

Tied at 280 and winner of $1,600 apiece were former national open champion Cary Middlecoff of 36 holes with rounds of 67-68, three strokes in front. He stretched the lead to five strokes with a 69 yesterday.

He expected a challenge from Middlecoff, with a 70-67-70 behind, and the veteran Harrison, who was playing well with his 69-67-71.

Harrison, playing just ahead of the Littler-Middlecoff-Kroll threesome, crept up on the amateur champion at the end of the 63rd hole. He was three strokes off the pace, and Middlecoff was four behind.

But Littler birdied the 11th and 12th holes, the latter with a 20-foot putt on a rain-soaked green, and threw in the clincher with a birdie two on the 17th.

As the gallery of hundreds huddled in the rain to watch the local idol come home, Gene was on the 511-yard long hole in a conservative three, 20 feet from the pin, and used two putts to get down for par.

Whereas 49 players cracked par in the first round, only five were able to get under the 72 today. All had 73s.

They were Jimmy Demaret of Klamath Lake, N.Y., Harrison, Jay Hebert, Woodmere, N.Y., Jack Fleck, Davenport, Iowa, and Kroll.

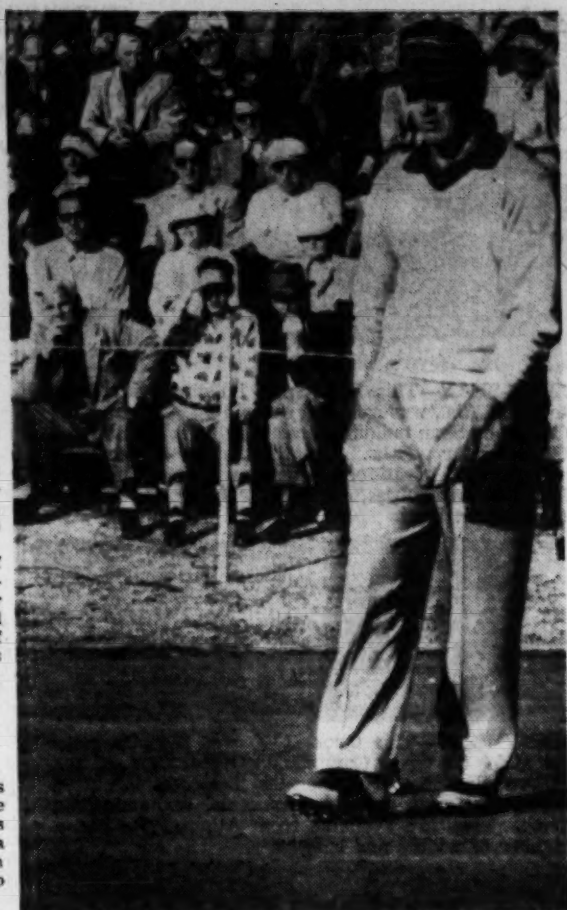

There were several who had a gambling chance to land farther up in the money as play began. Marty Furgol of Lamont, Ill., started out at 209 with Kroll but accepted 78 for the round for a 287 total.

Tied at 285 were Demaret, Shelley Mayfield, Chico, Calif., and a last round 73, and stocky Ted Kroll of New Hartford, N.Y., with a 71.

Littler, an enlisted man in the Navy Air Force, led Middlecoff and Harrison by five strokes going into this final round, and his lead was never seriously threatened.

Alone at 282 was Bob Toski of Northampton, Mass., with a last round 74, while Ed Furgol of St. Louis, with a 73, had 283.

Littler, a remarkably cool young man who may soon be discharged from the Navy and who, his friends believe, will turn professional, took the lead in the tournament at the end of

Two Dogs Steal Show In Continental Trials

Haberdasher, Stratoliner Highlight Sunday's Meeting

By BILL ALLEN
Constitution Sports Writer

QUITMAN, Jan. 24.—With only eight more dogs to run in the first series of this 55th Continental field trial championship, professional trainer Paul Walker's two pointers, The Haberdasher, owned by C. H. Edwards, and Stratoliner stole the show today as the trials here neared an end.

Also showing well on birds was a very young dog, Killyth Georgia Rebel, runner-up in the covey championship early last week. He is a white and liver male owned by Mrs. G. M. Livingston, president of the Continental Club and owner of the 35,000-acre plantation where oldest covey championship on the continent is run.

Two-year-old Rebel, under the guidance of George Evans, had five finds, two of which compared perfectly with work contributed by much older dogs here.

But The Haberdasher, muscled white and orange pointer, gave the gallery its thrills of the afternoon with a series of five excellently handled covey finds. His head and tail were high on each find and he was a bold and tense dog with manner on each find. He had an unproductive, however, where he failed to find game and may have lost his chance for championship consideration. Walker's other dog, Stratoliner, had four good finds and stopped when game burst in front of him one time.

Mister Tyson, owned by Clint Rugg of Jamestown, N.Y., handled by Pete Smith, was braced with Young Rebel and had one of the trial's most beautiful covey finds in a thick briar field and two other pretty fair finds.

Hooten Tooten Newton, owned by Euclid Claussan of Augusta and handled by Fred Evans, had a good race field but relocated game one time and had an unproductive point. Free Press handled by Ed Mack Farrior, had one unproductive and one good find.

Tallahassee Gets Franchise in FFL
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP)—Tallahassee was voted into the Florida International Football League today. Directors said the action guarantees the FFL's operation in 1954 as a six-team league, and that two other clubs might be admitted later.

The formal application from Tallahassee, which did not field a team last season, was made by Johnny George and Bob Delaney, representing a citizens committee from Florida's capital city.

Atlantic Steel To Distribute Quonsets and Stran-Steel

Dr. Leigh Announces New 2-Week 'Health Vigor' Clinic

"Vigorous health is the key to better living," says an announcement today from Dr. Daniel B. Leigh, noted Atlanta chiropractor, who begins a special two-week "Health Vigor" clinic for new patients, offering free consultation without charge or obligation.

In calling upon all Atlantans to resolve to "seek and keep good health this year," Dr. Leigh also takes pleasure in calling attention to the recent installation in his clinic of the latest and most scientific Photo-Electric nerve tracing instrument yet developed. Note accompanying photograph. Dr. Leigh's offices and clinic are located at 40 Peachtree Pl., N. W.

The Photo-Electric Visual Nerve Tracing Instrument is a precision instrument which detects and accurately measures the reflection from areas of hyperemia (congestion of the blood in the capillaries under the skin) adjacent to the spine. This is done by sending a light beam into the skin and picking up the reflection with two sensitive electric eyes (photo-cells) which are connected to an extremely sensitive galvanometer.

"When a nerve is irritated, a

"MAGIC EYES OF CHIROPRACTIC"—Using the new photoelectric nerve-tracing instrument, Dr. Daniel B. Leigh's Chiropractic Clinic makes a careful diagnosis of every case before treatment. Above, Dr. Leigh utilizes the nerve-tracing instrument in a spinal diagnosis of a patient, F. A. Barfield. Dr. Leigh is now featuring a special two-week "Health Vigor" clinic, beginning today, offering free consultation without obligation. Call Dr. Leigh, ATwood 4411, for appointment.

congestion of the tiny blood vessels takes place in the skin along the path of the nerve," stated Dr. Leigh. "These blood vessels are located in the lowermost portion of the skin, the Corium. The upper four layers have no blood vessels. The search units of our new instrument send a beam of green light into the skin, and this light is reflected by the hemoglobin of the blood. This reflection is invisible to the eye, and it is picked up by the photo-electric cells and measured on a sensitive galvanometer. This galvanometer is so sensitive that it measures in units of two hundred millionths of an ampere."

Open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Dr. Leigh's modern clinic makes available to the public up-to-date diagnosis and treatment in the field of chronic disease and ailments, some of which are high and low blood pressure, arthritis, backache, asthma, constipation, nervous troubles, stomach disorders, hyperacidity, sinus and other conditions.

Dr. Leigh emphasizes that no case is hurriedly diagnosed, regardless of its nature. Complete X-rays are taken at the beginning of treatment, and the patient's improvement is charted throughout.

Dr. Leigh believes that his new Visual Nerve Tracing Instrument will be invaluable in assuring accurate diagnosis quickly and dependably. "The Magic Eyes" of chiropractic locate the exact area needing attention, and the degree," he said. "This eliminates guesswork. Thus, science has supplanted old-fashioned rule of thumb methods. You are cordially invited to come in for examination with this scientific instrument."

For appointment, call ATwood 4411, or visit the Dr. Daniel B. Leigh Chiropractic Clinic at 40 Peachtree Pl., NW, open each day from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Will Handle Four Products In Four States

Announcement of Atlantic Steel Company as distributor for four products of the Great Lakes Steel Corporation in four Southern states paves the way for greatly increased sales of steel buildings and Stran-Steel construction in the area.

Atlantic Steel will distribute popular all-steel Quonset buildings and the new, straight-sided Long-Span steel buildings in 101 Georgia counties, 33 Alabama counties, 51 middle Tennessee counties and 3 counties in South Carolina near Savannah.

The Atlanta firm will also distribute Stran-Steel nailable framing and cold formed structural sections in the same territory.

Atlantic Steel will continue as a dealer for the products in the Atlanta area. It has served in this capacity since March, 1951. At the present time there are 22 dealers in the rest of the territory, but the steel company plans to increase the number immediately.

DEALERS URGED TO INQUIRE
In fact, John T. Butler, assistant manager of the Warehouse Division, who will head up the expanded program said: "We are anxious to secure additional dealers throughout the area. There are a number of desirable territories open and we invite inquiries from responsible dealers. Just tell them to

NEW PERSONNEL ADDED
In addition to J. D. Murphy, steel building specialist of the Atlantic Steel Company Warehouse Division, and John Nelson, experienced salesman of the division, new personnel has been added to aid in carrying out the expanded sales activity.

Three members of the Mid-South Steel Company, former distributor, have joined the sales staff of Atlantic Steel's new steel building sales division. They are: Mrs. Blanche McRae, who will work in the Atlanta office; and C. Dick Carmack and John White, who will be field managers. Mr. White will have headquarters in Nashville, Tennessee.

TAYLOR NAMED ENGINEER
Robert H. Taylor, formerly with Steel Builders of Atlanta, has been named engineer of the division. A graduate of Georgia Tech and a licensed, registered design and structural engineer, Mr. Taylor has had a long experience with Stran-

Steel. He will work closely with architects, engineers and contractors, specializing in the Stran-Steel framing and structural sections.

ingway married her in 1946. She was his fourth wife, the first three marriages having ended in divorce. He had three sons by his first two marriages.

Hemingway's sons are Patrick, who lives in Nairobi; Capt. John, an Army officer stationed at Ft. Bragg, N.C.; and Gregory, until recently a resident of Venice, Calif.

The author has a sister, Madeline, and a brother, Leicester. His mother, Mrs. Grace Hall Hemingway, died about 18 months ago.

MAN OF ACTION
Hemingway, a tall, powerfully built man who often wore a beard, was a man of action as well as a writer of action stories.

He served as a soldier with the Italian infantry in World War I and later as a correspondent. He also covered World War II in Europe and received the War Department's Bronze Star for meritorious service.

But his wide fame stemmed from his rugged stories of action and adventure. And from his varied experiences in many parts of the world came material for his realistic tales.

A master of dialogue, he had an extraordinary gift for writing the way people think, talk and act. Much of his writing dealt with violence. "Death in the Afternoon" was a vivid account of bullfighting. "The Green Hills of Africa" dealt with an African big game hunt. "A Farewell to Arms," his first big novel, told of the fighting on the Italian front in World War I, partly from his own experiences.

SPANISH CIVIL WAR

He wrote several works on his experiences covering the Spanish civil war. The most famous was the highly successful novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," which was made into a widely acclaimed motion picture.

His most recent triumph was a short novel "The Old Man and the Sea" which won the 1953 Pulitzer award for fiction. The simply told tale of an old Cuban fisherman's victory and defeat is considered a masterpiece of simple, powerful writing. In writing the book, Hemingway dealt with a subject Hemingway knew and loved—deep-sea fishing. The locale was the Gulf Stream near Cuba where Hemingway had often fished himself. And it was near Hemingway's Cuban home.

"NOBODY DARES"

Sinclair Lewis, the novelist, once described Hemingway, who never attended college, as an author "whom nobody dares offer an honorary degree."

He said the husky author was the prime interpreter of a world-wide revolution and that while he wrote for a generation that had set itself adrift, he never became one of the professional revolutionists, either political or moral.

Born in Oak Park, Ill., Hemingway was one of six children of a physician. He spent much of his boyhood in Michigan, participating in sports and accompanying his father on hunting trips. In high school he played football and acquired a reputation as a boxer.

After his graduation he became a cub reporter on the Kansas City Star, but soon joined an American ambulance unit bound for the front in the first World War. He later transferred to the Italian infantry and was wounded by a mortar burst.

CAREER BORN IN PARIS

His literary career began in postwar Paris where he served as correspondent for the Toronto Star.

The Army maintains 60 depots in the United States and 68 depots in overseas areas to receive, store and issue military supplies and equipment.

and did sideline writing for periodicals. They were collected in 1923 for his first book "Three Stories and 10 Poems."

In the years that followed a flood of increasingly popular novels and short stories flowed from his typewriter.

They included "In Our Time," "The Torrents of Spring," "The Sun Also Rises," "Men Without Women," "Winner Take Nothing," and "To Have and Have Not."

Between books, he found time to cover minor wars in the Near East and he reported the Spanish civil war for the North American Newspaper Alliance. The Spanish conflict had his personal interest because he had lived for about 12 years in Spain.

World War II found him back in Europe as a correspondent for Collier's magazine. In 1944, still convalescing from an automobile accident, he sailed in an attack transport at the start of the Allied invasion of France. Shortly after the invasion he joined a French partisan unit and became a captain. In one exploit, he helped in the capture of six Germans.

Many of his novels were best sellers. Some were not and Hemingway reacted violently to adverse criticism.

SHOWED HAIRY CHEST

This led in 1937 to an exchange of fistfists with poet-critic Max Eastman. Eastman, in writing on "Death in the Afternoon," accused Hemingway of "wearing false hair on the chest." Hemingway threw a book in his face, opened his shirt and showed a good thatch.

He was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in May, 1953. At the same time President Fulgencio Batista conferred the Order of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, Cuba's highest decoration. He had spent most of his recent years in Cuba.

Hemingway's first wife was Mrs. Hadley Richardson Hemingway. They were married in 1921 and divorced six years later after the birth of one son, John. He married Pauline Pfeiffer, a fashion writer, in Paris in 1927. They had two sons, Patrick and Gregory, before their divorce in 1940.

DIVORCED IN 1940
Hemingway then married Martha Gellhorn, author and magazine writer in Cheyenne, Wyo. They were divorced in Havana in 1946 and a few months later Hemingway married Mary Welsh.

He was not as fine as we would wish and as good friends anyway. Philip has only one defect. He is going to die, as all of us will."

Hemingway wrote affectionately of his long-time friend, Philip Percival, the "white hunter" who accompanied him on the trip, although "He had been retired for three years and never intended to take out a safari again."

Of Percival, Hemingway said: "He was also more fun to be with than anyone I know. . . . He loves the animals and respects and knows them as few other people ever can. And when things start to be bad he is as young as when he galloped lion 50 years ago on the lovely broken hill of Wamli."

"Philip Percival is the finest man I know. This statement covers very much ground and is not intended to offend good friends."

Former Augustan Sought in Slaying In Tennessee

Georgia and Tennessee police Sunday were searching for Robert G. Duke, 39, former Augusta H-bomb plant worker, wanted in connection with the slaying of an Oak Ridge, Tenn., couple at their home Sunday.

Oak Ridge Police Chief C. T. Vettel said that Duke was identified as the person who walked into the home of his father-in-law, Leonard H. Barker, and announced, "I've come to get my wife and kids."

A sister-in-law, Mrs. John P. Stephens, also visiting at the home at the time, said he then began shooting, killing her parents and wounding her husband.

Police said Duke abandoned car was found later in Knoxville. Also, police said a man told of giving a man answering Duke's description a ride to the bus station.

It's Marine Week —By Proclamation

Gov. Talmadge has proclaimed this week United States Marine Corps Week in Georgia.

Honoring the Georgians who volunteered for the Marine Corps during 1953, Talmadge pointed out in his proclamation that the Georgia "Cracker" Marine Platoon was named an honor platoon for its outstanding performance during its recruit training.

The proclamation praises the organized Marine Corps reserve units in the state for the "fine military training which affords the youth of the State of Georgia the opportunity to prepare themselves for the defense of our country."

Atlanta's Bonnets Blossom

By AGNES McCARTY
Women have every right to lose their heads over a spring hat.

Easter bonnets are traditionally bright and frivolous. The gay little spirit lifters may herald the first "robbin'" of the family's warm weather clothes budget. They may also be thrifty purchases that even the most dollar-conscious husband won't object to.

A selection of forward, backward, feathered, bowed, flowered, small and huge chapeaus have already arrived in Atlanta. At first glance the trend seems to be towards the small, forward hat with upswept lines to go with the new dress silhouette.

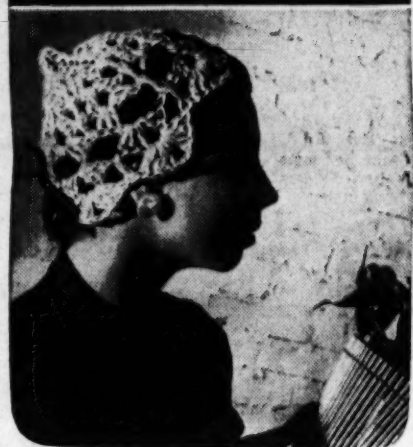

Second look indicates that there are also many cartwheels and pillboxes worn straight on or slightly to the back of the head.

The Normand Durant hat featured is priced at $19.98. The John Frederica charmer costs $12.98. Imported French model is $35. The bee bonnet by John Frederica is $59.98. Laddie Northridge's hyacinth hat costs $69.98 and the Leslie James cartwheel price is $49.98. Milgrim's little quill-trimmed hat sells for $19.98. J. Howard Hodge's straw and coral hat costs $32.98.

Success Report Bolsters Dieters

By IDA JEAN KAIN

There's nothing like knowing you're on the right track to inspire confidence and bolster staying power. Today's letter is proof of the pudding:

"After many attempts at dieting, I abandoned the fad-diet which left me weak and easily tempted and followed the safe and sane scientific dieting you advocate in your column. By this plan I lose more slowly, but more steadily and it stays off. I feel much better, too."

"A few weeks ago you listed some little ruses that dieters have used to spell success. I agree it is often the 'little things' that make or break us in this endeavor. Perhaps a few of my own tips will help someone else:

"I used to piece-meal and post-meal . . . in fact I ate the equivalent of a full meal, just tasting while preparing the family meal and, of course, ate the meal at the table."

"PIECE-MEAL," "POST-MEAL"

Then I ate another small meal while clearing up, being reluctant to save a little of this and that, and hating to see things wasted. Naturally, by this plan they went to 'waist.'

"When I realized where my excess weight was coming from, I took steps to stop this practice. To break the habit, I now place a plate of carrot strips and cabbage chunks or celery stalks on the counter before I start cooking."

EASES HUNGER

This not only keeps me from tasting all the good things I am fixing, but nibbling on these nonfattening vegetables takes the edge off my hunger and I do not want to stuff at the table. While clearing off the table and putting food away, I chew gum, or nibble at more celery. It works!

"Another ruse: I love to sew but have vowed not to make another outside dress. Instead, I find satisfaction in planning my wardrobe, buying materials and collecting patterns in my ideal size. I have a special drawer for this collection and sometimes when I am quite tempted to indulge, I take the time to look over my pretty materials.

Man I Married

Gillems' First Home Was Tent

By YOLANDE GWIN

"The first home I had with the man I married was a tent on the Mexican border."

This statement comes from Mrs. Alvan C. Gillem Sr., wife of Lt. Gen. Gillem, U.S. Army, retired.

"Our last home was at Fort McPherson where we had 21 rooms and seven baths," she added.

The Gillems chose Atlanta as their past army life home because of "pressure brought by our friends," says Mrs. Gillem. They live in an attractive home on Cantrell Road.

"I joined the Army as a recruit," Mrs. Gillem says, "and I'm still one, even though I've followed the man I married all over the world.

(One in a series.)

"His hobby is sports. Pictures of champions in various sports as well as many Army and civilian friends cover the walls of his den. Many scrapbooks are filled with additional photos."

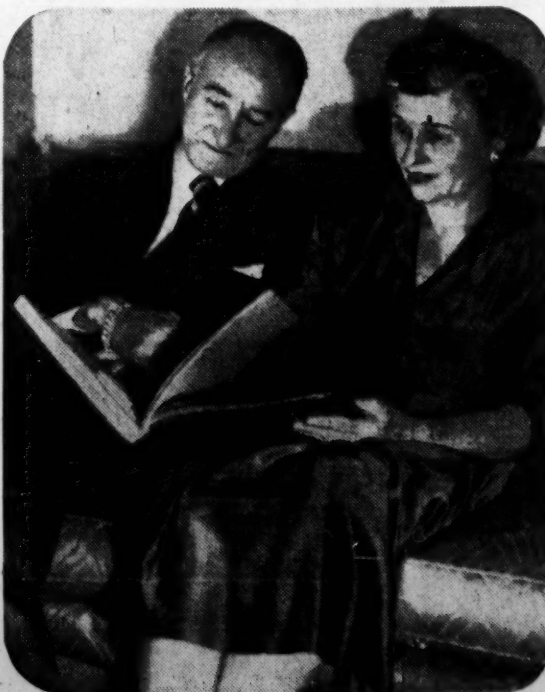

NOT TOO DOMESTIC

"I think I'd rate him as not too domestic, but certainly a man who is easy to live with and easy to get along with all the time. He eats anything and likes it. He doesn't like to cook, but sometimes he does fix some favorite dish for his breakfast."

The general enjoys gardening too, according to his wife, and at present his specialties are roses and camellias.

CHILI, FAMOUS 'COWBOY'S STEW', WITH RICE
Made With Coarsely Ground Meat and Kidney Beans

Hot 'Cowboy Stew' Invades American Family Meals

By JEANNE HIGGINS

Chili, with or without beans, is the famous "cowboy stew" that has established a permanent place in American meals from society buffets to casual family tables.

Chili powder, the spice used in chili con carne, is a seasoning usually made of ground chili pepper, oregano, cumin, garlic and salt. It is a warm, not hot, spice, and should always be seasoned to taste, since preferences vary widely.

Ask for coarsely ground beef for this dish, and be sure to add beans in the final period of cooking in order to avoid their becoming too soft. Kidney beans are the most commonly used.

CHILI CON CARNE WITH RICE

3 tablespoons fat

1½ lbs. lean beef, coarsely ground.

1 medium onion, finely chopped.

2 tablespoons flour

4 ripe tomatoes (or 1 cup canned tomatoes)

1 8-oz. can tomato sauce

1 teaspoon garlic powder

2½ cups water

¼ teaspoon whole oregano leaves.

1 teaspoon salt

¼ teaspoon ground black pepper.

4 teaspoons chili powder (or more to taste)

1 tablespoon vinegar

1 teaspoon brown sugar

1 can kidney beans

1½ cups pre-cooked rice (cooked)

1. Melt fat. 2. Combine meat and onions. Coat with flour.

Brown. 3. Peel and chop tomaatoes coarsely. Add to meat. 4. Add tomato sauce, garlic powder and water. Cover and simmer two hours or until meat is tender, stirring occasionally and adding more water if necessary. 5. Add remaining ingredients and simmer ten minutes longer. (If regular ground beef is used, only simmer the sauce an hour.) 6. Serve garnished with rice. Serves five to six.

DAILY GUIDE—Since this will be a week of going back over some of the recent decisions, you might get a very early start this morning if you want to get going on the right foot. The noon hour may bring some unexpected displays of temperment, but the man who can afford to be patient and then forgive will gain in the long run. The later hours bring a return of vagueness and a confusion of issues. This mixture of emotional thinking has been a constant menace to the world getting out of the mess it is in. Do your part by trying to keep clear-headed.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AQUARIUS! This should be a pleasant period for you when you look your best, are able to see friends and enjoy them, and might even be able to travel, or at least get around more. In the background there could be a hint of larger issues on their way, and may be harder to deal with later in the year. Your career, your position in life, or those in authority loom up now as problems which might curtail your liberty. The latter is very important to you, so this might not suit you. Use the next few months to promote a trip or some project dear to your heart.

CONSTIPATED?

If you suffer from constipation, don't miss reading this letter from Bess Durham!

"Honestly, I'm like a new person these days," smiles Bess Durham, Memphis, Tenn. "I used to suffer something awful from constipation. Couldn't seem to get relief from the laxatives I was using for half the day or so. And then I discovered Sal Hepatica. What a wonderful friend it's been. Why, if I wake up feeling lousy and constipated, I take sparkling Sal Hepatica before breakfast, and get gentle, speedy relief usually within an hour!"

Yes, that's how to avoid "Laxative Lag" with Sal Hepatica. Sal Hepatica gives quiet, speedy, gentle relief from constipation... sweetens sour stomach, too! So keep Sal Hepatica handy in your medicine chest.

Gentle, speedy
SAL HEPATICA

Laxative Lag—that feeling of discomfort that continues for hours until ordinary, slow-acting laxatives bring relief.

Celestine Sibley Week Among The Monks

One of our local Catholic priests recently castigated the young people of today for worshipping not God but movie stars, adding some tart and bitter references to "St. Marilyn" and "St. Ava." Then the Pope came out with a statement about evil activities in Hollywood.

Hollywood may deserve a lot of the criticism it gets, I don't know. But it interests me that about the time the clergy was perturbed about the destructive influence of the movie capital I got a letter from a press agent friend who is with the Robert Taylor-Eleanor Parker company making a picture called "Valley of the Kings" in Egypt.

He is Morgan Hudgens, a former Journal reporter, who spends most of his time these days traveling around the world with such people as Clark Gable, Robert Taylor and the over-adulated "St. Ava." But this time he wrote me from what he called "one of Christendom's most sacred and revered shrines, a remote religious outpost on Sinai Peninsula in Asia."

Tiny St. Catherine's Monastery, photographed for the screen for the first time by the MGM company, is a walled-in sanctuary standing on the spot where Moses is supposed to have seen the bush which burned with fire without being consumed. And it is at the base of the mountain, Morgan informs me, on which Moses received the revelation of the Ten Commandments.

"Taylor and the other stars lived for a week among the 19 monks who are the lone residents of the place," Morgan wrote. "They slept on wooden cots in the cells which the monastery provides for pilgrims and joined the holy men in their meagre daily routines."

Although eight of the monks had never seen a motion picture they showed very little interest in film making itself but proved willing hosts and did not object to playing themselves. Morgan was impressed by the history of the monastery. "It stands, serene and in rugged grandeur, amidst a clump of giant cypresses and backed by the parched and rocky sides of Mt. Sinai. It possesses all the features of a compact town with its crooked streets and its haphazard plan and it has its own fresh water supplied by two wells, its own bakery, a mill where corn is ground, its olive press and vegetable garden."

Until 50 years ago the monastery had no door but visitors gained admittance by being hauled up by ropes into a penthouse that opens into the monastery about 30 feet above the ground. One scene shot by the movie makers was the Charnel House, where the bones and skulls of all the monks who have died through the centuries have been piled. A small plot of ground in front of the house is used as a burial site but after about two years the bones of all dead priests are removed to the Charnel House where, wrote Morgan, "no man's bones will again be distinguishable from his fellows."

The monks spend their time in meditation, tending the garden and caring for the monastery's "one great material treasure, its world famous library with over 3,000 priceless manuscripts, among them a Gospel from the 4th Century."

Morgan said Robert Taylor and some other members of the company considered the journey to Sinai and the visit to St. Catherine's one of the most memorable experiences of their lives. The monks set a record with Director-Writer Robert Pireth by not asking to have a special showing of the film when it is released but the movie-makers weren't particularly surprised.

"Doubtless," wrote Morgan, "they feel secure in the knowledge that St. Catherine's will endure long after 'Valley of the Kings' and perhaps Hollywood have become a part of the remote past."

Amaryllis Is Hardy House Plant

The amaryllis is one of the easiest of house plants to grow, for it can be kept from year to year with little care.

Dormant bulbs should be started now for late winter bloom by planting them in pots just a little larger than the bulb and leaving one-half to two-thirds of the bulb exposed. A soil mixture of highly organic potting soil is desirable for these plants. No plant food is necessary now.

Keep the potted bulb in a cool basement and keep the soil moist until the flower bud, which appears before the leaf, emerges from the bulb, then set the plant in a sunny window and give it plenty of water. During the growing period feed it twice a month with a good plant solution made by dissolving one teaspoon per quart of water.

Ansel Park Garden Club meets Monday with Mrs. W. E. Cary at 247 Frado. Mrs. Henry Powell will speak on the cultivation of certain plants and various methods of walling in gardens. Mrs. John Smith will speak the cultivation of house plants.

Peachtree Battle Garden Club meets with Mrs. Harry L. Richardson at 11 a.m. Tuesday at her home, 550 Westover Dr., N.W. The assistant hostess will be Mrs. Herman Rogers.

Mrs. T. F. Davenport will speak on "Pruning, How, When and Why." There will be an election of officers and judging of arrangements made by club members.

Perennial Garden Club meets at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday with Miss May Hudson at 1474 Peachtree St., N.E. Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Z. W. Jones, Mrs. C.

MARY HAWORTH

Engaged Daughter Fears Approaching Altar Date

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter Jeanne is to be married soon, and as the wedding date approaches, she becomes increasingly worried about the problem of physical adjustment to marriage. She seems to have a mortal fear in this respect.

I cannot imagine the basis for her fears. She has always been well protected. And her father and I are well adjusted and happy together. She has several girl friends who are happily married, and I don't believe they have contributed to her fears either.

Jeanne is in her early twenties, is a graduate of high school and college, and at present has a very good position. She has always had plenty of dates, and acted natural and at ease around boys. She says she loves her fiancé.

I have reasoned with her, to no avail, until I am at my wits' end. Also I have advised her to talk with our family doctor. Can you think of any books that might help?

L.K.
DEAR L. K.: Since you cannot account for Jeanne's sudden fear, it is logical to assume that she hasn't been fully frank with you about the problem. Apparently she is keeping secret the real reason for her anxiety.

Jeanne may feel, and rightly, that you would register pain and shock if she were to bare her soul to you. She may fear disapproval or condemnation from you quite as much as she dreads disappointing her husband. Indeed her worry about marital adjustments may be a direct offshoot of filial tension.

Inasmuch as she has "always been well protected," as you say, perhaps perfectionist standards of behavior have been preached to her at home. And judging herself by these standards, and feeling she falls short of them, she might be unduly disturbed in her approach to conjugal intimacy.

Offhand I can't think of a book that might put Jeanne's mind at rest—unless it be Reuben Hill's and Evelyn Duvall's "When You Marry" (Association Press). As I understand, one (or possibly both) of the authors is a marriage counselor on a college faculty—thus familiar with youth's range of problems. My suggestion for Jeanne is to "tell all" to a kindly clergyman and take his advice. M.H.

"The Treasury announced it is winding up the calendar year of 1953 slightly over nine billion dollars in the red."—News item.

I'm glad that Uncle Sam has learned . . . (as he came to his "fiscal end" . . .) like us, the money he has earned . . . won't jibe with what he's forced to spend . . . it made no difference what we had . . . it always took a little more . . . and if our management was bad . . . he's also guilty on that score.

He had a big advantage, to . . . he never paid the smallest bit . . . of taxes; which we had to do . . . or he would have a running-fit . . . he didn't have to ask someone . . . if he could get a raise in pay . . . he told himself, "It must be done" . . . and went and took it anyway.

Nobody knows how it will end . . . it is a vicious spiral that . . . each day continues to ascend . . . and, in ascending, leaves us flat . . . and if there's something that is wrong . . . with his account, let's hope he'll see . . . how hard it is to get along . . . and sympathize with you and me.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠ A 7 5 ♥ 9 7 5 3 ♦ K 7 5 2 ♣ 8 5

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 spade Pass 2 hearts Pass

3 hearts Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The question put to you by North's three heart bid is essentially this: "Partner, did you have one of those skimpy raises just to keep the bidding open, or did you have one that was fairly decent?" The answer should place your hand in the latter category. It is worth 8 points in support of hearts. A mere courtesy raise might contain as little as 6 points. You should therefore accept the invitation and bid four hearts.

Q. 2—You are South with 80 part score and you hold:

♠ A Q ♥ A 7 3 ♦ K 10 8 6 4 3 ♠ 10 7

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 spade Pass 2 hearts Pass

3 hearts Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The recommended procedure is a cue bid of four hearts, to be followed by a bid of six spades on the next round. Partner has opened the bidding and jumped over the game, where a free bid itself would have indicated a strong hand. Since you have better than an opening bid and important key cards, the slam should be a cinch. However, in case a grand slam should be available, it may be necessary for you to show control of the adverse suit.

Q. 3—As South you hold:

♠ A 7 3 ♥ 9 8 4 3 ♦ A K 8 4 ♠ A 3

What is your opening bid?

A.—One no trump. This hand contains 17 points in high cards, has three suits protected, and is of balanced distribution. An opening bid of one diamond is not the best tactic, for it leaves you with no convenient rebid if partner responds with either one heart or one spade. A single raise would be inadequate. A minimum rebid would, of course, be out of the question, and no moderate strength showing bid would be available. An opening one no trump bid avoids this difficulty.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠ 6 4 3 ♥ A 4 ♦ A 9 8 5 ♣ K J 5 3

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 spade Pass 2 hearts Pass

3 hearts Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—Chances for a game are extremely bright when one considers partner's vulnerable overall. One thing is certain: Unless partner is a known prodigal, his trump suit should be a very good one. It is to be hoped that you were not naive enough to show one of your own suits. In this sequence partner is under no obligation to proceed, and you might find it uncomfortable to be left in a contract of three clubs or three diamonds. The proper procedure is to raise to three hearts, or, with a rather timid

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE E. VANDELLEN

Franklin Pointed To Lead Poisoning

PEWTER was a favorite wedding gift in colonial times and the pride of every good housekeeper. By definition, pewter is one of a series of alloys in which tin is the dominant ingredient, with antimony, copper, and bismuth acting as hardening agents.

On the other hand, lead frequently is added at a level of approximately 10 per cent; but in colonial days, a 50 per cent lead content was common. As a result, lead poisoning (dry-gripes) was prevalent, although the relationship between the two was not known.

In 1723 the Massachusetts Bay colony passed a law prohibiting the distillation of rum thru pewter stills. This action was remarkable because it followed complaints from North Carolina drinkers about developing lead poisoning from New England rum.

The story was told recently by Dr. Carey McCord, in Industrial Medicine and Surgery, of an interest because it offers a clue to the discovery of this source of lead poisoning.

The first news of the epidemic in North Carolina reached the north through the offices of Benjamin Franklin, who was running the New England Courant for his brother, James, who was in jail. Undoubtedly Franklin took the matter before a triumvirate of Boston notables for consideration, lest his publication of the story get him into trouble with the rum distillers, and in jail, too.

Franklin deserves as much credit as the others as a discoverer of the lead poisoning, thus adding another "first" to his amazing list of accomplishments. All of this happened 64 years before George Baker proved that Devonshire colic was derived from lead in elder mills.

Lead poisoning still exists today and more recently has come into the news because of its prevalence among youngsters who enjoy eating the flakes of paint that fall from walls or peel from window sills. The paint in question has a high lead content and in some instances fatalities occurred.

In proportion to their size, whales have a larger amount of blood than other mammals.

The Worry Clinic

By
DR. GEORGE
W. CRANE

All Prison Inmates Are Happy for Mail

Milton L., aged 38, attended my Sunday school class at the Chicago TEMPLE last week.

"Dr. Crane, I'm what you might call a reformed jailbird," he said.

"Oh, I used to be a successful business man and had a fortune of close to half a million dollars. But some of my dealings were declared illegal, so I was sent to prison."

"While there, I noticed several interesting things which I wish you'd mention in your column."

"First of all, there are all sorts of people in jail. Some are potentially good men who just got started on the wrong high-way and could be salvaged."

"Others are so low in I. Q., and such inveterate crooks that it might be almost impossible to change them."

MAIL HUNGRY

"But all of them are letter-hungry."

"A few get letters. But others never obtain a single letter or even a postcard from one month to another."

"They'd be delighted if they received just a piece of direct mail advertising."

"For it would perk up their morale and give them something to look forward to."

"So please call the members of the families of these men in prison to please drop a postcard or a letter at least occasionally, even if the prisoner is due to spend his entire life behind the bars."

"Some of the boys read your column and would write to you for advice or for some of your printed bulletins. Then they would pass your letters around for their pals to see."

"We even had a school organized by a former professor who was in prison for forgery."

"And he did a tremendous amount of good. For prisoners must occupy their minds with something or they'll blow their tops.

PRISON SUNDAY SCHOOLS

"So I am devoting my life henceforth to helping organize prison Sunday schools."

"One Sabbath morning I attended religious services."

"Afterwards, a Sunday school class was scheduled. Well, I used to go to Sunday school and even taught a Bible class for a time."

"So I drifted over to the clump of men. A Negro was trying to teach them, but he wasn't very well educated. So I helped out a little, and afterwards, he begged me to become their teacher."

"I refused at first, but the next Sunday I took the job. And that class grew so large that I almost refused to leave the prison when I was eligible for parole."

"And now I have decided to help launch Sunday schools among the prisons of America. Our U.S. Crime Reports show 1,882,100 offenses in the past year, ranging from murder to rape, burglary and auto theft."

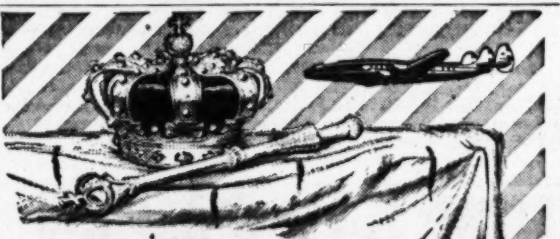

"And there are almost 200,000 foreign men in our state and federal prisons. So don't you think they deserve a little Christian charity, such as a postcard

Announce New Way To Shrink Painful Piles

Find Healing Substance That Does Both—
Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to stop bleeding—without surgery. In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations. Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place. And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months! In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing. All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body. Now this new healing substance is offered in ointment form for hemorrhoids under the name "Preparation H." The price is only 98¢ a tube including an applicator. The name to ask for is Preparation H—at all drug stores. And remember—if not entirely satisfied—your money will be refunded promptly. Trade Mark.

Island Too Wild Even for Wolves

HOUGHTON, Mich. (UP)—Isle Royale, often referred to as the "wildest place" in the United States, is too wild even for wolves. The vacation island, located 50 miles off Michigan's Upper Peninsula in Lake Superior, attracts dyed-in-the-wool sportsmen and true outdoor enthusiasts—not the tourist types.

Animals of many types roam in its wilderness. Their contacts with the humans are few and far between. In fact, during the winter months the island is devoid of all human life.

Only an occasional aerial patrol breaks the spell of nature-in-the-raw while thick ice covers Lake Michigan between December and April.

In 1952, game officials picked it as the spot to turn a group of wolves back to their natural habitat.

Accustomed to the fruits of civilization they enjoyed while in captivity, the animals balked at penetrating the inner reaches of the wooded island in search of food. They finally were removed and shipped back to the mainland when game officials could not coax them away from tourist cabins
